

COLLEGE WORLD

Since the advent of the adult coloring books, Bob Jordan of Seattle University's Spectator recently offered drawings to be colored, with the following captions:

I am a college student, Color me ivy league, notice my pipe. It looks good, It tastes awful. Color it prominent. Notice my sunglasses. They keep the rain out of my eyes. Color them useful.

These are my parents. They pay for my education. Color them poor. They thought college would make me a better man. Color them disillusioned.

This is my cigarette pack. Everybody borrows it. Color it empty.

This is my adviser. He sees that I get the right classes. Color him blind. He is happy when I get good grades. Color him sad. He dresses intellectually. Color him sloppy.

These are my tennis shoes. They are my status symbols. I am a big wheel. Color the toes out. Color the laces broken. Color one lost under my bed.

According to the Belles of St. Mary's in Raleigh some statements by females have hidden meanings. For example:

She says: "Yes, I dated at the S.A.E. house Saturday night. It was okay, I guess."

She means: "Oh, golly gee, hot digety darn, I finally got to the S.A.E. house!"

She says: "Well . . . I don't usually blind date at all, but I think I can make it this time."

She means: "Thank goodness, a chance to get out! Who is he? What'll we do? What'll I wear? Do I have time to get my hair done?" (mild panic).

So our opinions are confirmed as truths. Now we know!

answers a question that was recently discussed in the Decree office, that of the stand taken by college newspaper editors in Mississippi on the segregation issue. After condemning Mississippi's governor Ross Barnett, Melvin Meyer of the Crimson and White (University of Alabama) received several anonymous telephone calls threatening his life. He has also received offers of free trips out of town in "a pine box," and a cross has been burned in front of the twenty year old editor's fraternity house.

And that's today's College World.

Phi Sigma Officers Chosen At Meeting

The members of Phi Sigma met on Jan. 29 to elect officers for the first fraternity on the Wesleyan campus. Royall Brown was installed as president. Other officers were: Vice President, Chet Murphy; Secretary, Guy Turner; Treasurer, Mel Whitmore; and Historian, Doug Zellner.

The motto of the fraternity, "Faithful Service," was formally recognized. Various projects were brought before the members, and a committee was appointed to evaluate the proposed projects.

Although Phi Sigma is now a local fraternity, the members look forward to eventual association with the national fraternity Alpha Phi Omega.

"Common sense," therefore, as the all-solving, all-saving mental power present in all of us is nothing more than a romantic sham.

If "common sense" is anything at all, it is merely a catch-all term to be used liberally wherever more accurate words cannot be thought of. In fact, whenever someone who is trying to convince us of something asks us to use our "common sense" we may be sure of one of two things: one, he is an enlightened individual who is trying to get some new fact through our thick heads by flattering our intelligence, or two, he is a crackpot who cannot produce sound reasons for his viewpoint but wants to be believed on the basis of his word alone. In either case his argument is purely an emotional one and has no relation to logic, common or uncommon.

The lie of "common sense" is so firmly implanted in our heads that all the evidence to the contrary may never be able to remove it. (Our "common sense" tells us that.) But the lie can be altered a bit in such a way that present idea will temporarily correspond with present fact. Take the term "common sense" and for the word, "sense" merely substitute the word, "mentality."

Paperback Book Cover Show

New Exhibit Opens

The Third Annual Paperback Book Cover Show sponsored by the American Institute of Graphic Arts is on display in the Exhibit Gallery at North Carolina Wesleyan College for a period of two weeks beginning Feb. 11. The Gallery will be open Monday through Friday from 9 to 9, on Saturday from 9 to 5 and on Sundays from 2 to 5. The exhibit is free of charge and the public is cordially invited to attend.

The exhibit is made up of 69 covers, including five books selected by the jury for good design, interior as well as cover. Graphic arts students and professionals will be interested in the original art, paste-ups, progressive proofs and other steps between the designer's concept and the finished product as it appears on the sales counter. Almost every design is accompanied by a piece of original material; Ben Shahn, for instance, sent five preliminary sketches of the lettering for a Doubleday entry, "American Poetry and Poetics."

Twenty publishers are represented in the exhibition, the lion's share going to New American Library, Bantam Books, Dutton, and Harper & Row, with six more covers selected for eachhouse.

Fifty-five art directors, designers, and artists are represented, including William R. Gregory, Leonard P. Leone, Robert Cheney, Cyril I. Nelson, Diana Klemm, Gilda Kuhlman, and Kim Taylor.

The range of subject matter is wide, from "Sumerian Mythology" to the boxed set of Durrell's "Alexandria Quartet." Shakespeare has two titles, as does Willa Cather.

Symbols play an important role in many of the designs. The white whale dominates Farrar-Straus' "A Reader's Guide to Herman Melville." A photograph of an early symbol is used in the "Story of Ancient History" and Rorschach-test figurations for "God and the Unconscious." Editions of the covers represented range from 1,000 for "corall 1961" to 200,000 for Prokosch's "Ballad of Love." It is not surprising that the highest print quantity is Agatha Christie's novel, "Poirot Investigates" which was published in an edition of 225,000.

The jurors of this year's exhibition were Irwin Glusker, art director of Horizon Magazine; Janet Halverson, designer; and George Tscherny, designer.

This is the first North Carolina showing of the Institute's third annual exhibit. It was shown in New York at the AIGA Galleries during December and is now beginning a cross-country tour of college galleries and museums. As a mirror of the graphic arts in the book-publishing field, it should prove of wide interest to the public in general and to graphic arts students in particular.
