I Almost Registered

Dear Mother

I am sorry to report that I could not matriculate into Wesleyan College.

First of all Wesleyan is set up similar to a railroad station -- time wise. You have Eastern Standard Time, Central Time, Mountain Time, Pacific Time and some kind of time peculiar to that region between Eastern Siberia and Alaska.

Then it takes a day or two to get your Chinese Coolie License running here and there like a blind dog in a meat house trying to register. You go back and forth between the business office, dining room, television room, your own room, the dean's office and a few other places thrown in for the hell of it. By this time, you have found where to begin registering.

A knowledge of forging would be helpful in obtaining signatures as there are few others to give them to you. After all this I felt that the process was nearly complete and indeed it was. I had managed to register my car. So alas, I have elected to drop back and punt!

Regretfully yours

IT'S YOUR PRIVILEGE

Interviewed

"I prefer the small college because it provides one with a better teaching atmosphere. I feel that here I am helping to build a college rather than merely following an established tradition. "I would like to see a greater pride exhibited by Wesleyan students in their school. Also, I feel that the 'herd instinct' or a lack of individualism is a fault found in too many of our students. This I would like to see corrected, particularly in the upper-classmen."

As chairman of the pre-registration committee, an experimental program for freshmen, Dr. Elliott hopes to design a plan that will make the actual registration much smoother. Such a program will aid the student when registering for his courses, and thus help avoid placement in subjects beyond his capabilities. If successful, the program will eventually be utilized by the entire student body.

Dr. Elliott received his B.A. from Furman University, his M.A. from the University of North Carolina, and his Ph. D. from the University of Georgia, specializing in Alfred Lord Tennyson. He has previously taught at Gardner-Webb Jr. College, Clemson University and Stetson College. He is married and the father of two small children.

... just a few words

By Melvin Dowdy

The confusing and baffling network of paths which structure the maze for a rat is his experimental environment. He is prone to frustration and dissatisfaction discovering, not the correct path but blind alleys. The maze only had meaning and value when, for selecting the correct path, the animal is rewarded.

Energies wasted in blind alleys can only frustrate and dissatisfy. Choosing the correct path, men find life meaningful, valuable and rewarding.
