Dorm condition not college's fault

You often hear men at Wesleyan say that they are not treated equally. If you compare dorms, it is easy to see which sex gets the better treatment. The women's dorms have a phone on each floor and one dorm received new lobby furniture this fall.

It appears that the men are getting shortchanged, but if a person delves further into the situation, it is apparent why the women are getting the better deal. For instance, Nash dorm did have a phone on the north side of the first floor, but resident director Anthony Rice decided not to replace it after it was ripped away from its foundation.

In addition, the hallways, lobbies, and bathrooms in the men's dorms are often abused. Beer bottles have been found strewn across the floors near the trash cans many times each weekend. This semester vandalism charges in the men's dorms remain well above that in the women's dorms.

Nash dorm is by far the worst. As of mid-February, Nash has had one door busted, 15 windows broken, many trash cans thrown out the windows, and its furniture abused.

This situation will probably continue until something is done, and the only thing that can be done is a change in attitude. Men of Wesleyan must clean up their act. Only then will the men's and women's dorms receive equal treatment.

Give us your recipes

The Food Service Department is attempting to put together a cookbook to sell this semester at the North Carolina Restaurant Show and the National Restaurant Show as well as on campus. We would like everyone to be a part of our project by bringing to Doc's your favorite recipes. Everything from various appetizers, salads, soups, to main dishes, desserts, or beverages. If you don't have a favorite recipe, maybe you have a helpful hint or two, or a unique gift idea.

Bring in as many as you like! After each recipe or idea you submit, you will be given credit in the cookbook. All appropriate donations will be published. Just drop off all recipes and ideas at Doc's Restaurant. We are very eager to begin designing the cookbook. David Ferrell has agreed to design the cover and do the illustrations. We do have one problem, though, and that is what to call our book. If you have any suggestions, just write them on your recipes when turning them in.

All proceeds made from the sale of the cookbooks will go toward educational grants in the Food Service and Hospitality Major.

Thanks for your support!

Overseas study offered

Susquehanna University will once again be offering students the opportunity to gain an international flavor to their education this summer with its 1988 Susquehanna at Oxford program.

The Oxford Summer Session, July 4 through Aug. 7, composes the majority of the program and gives students a chance to take credit courses taught by British professors while living at Oxford's Corpus Christi College.

In most cases, students enroll in two courses worth three to six semester hours of credit each. This summer, courses will be offered in British business management, economic history, archaeological history, politics, society, education and literature.

Participants are encouraged to join the summer-session group early for a three-week excursion, June 14 through July 3.

They may continue their European travel following completion of their Oxford course work with a post-

Summer Session excursion. This 19-day tour, August 7 through 24, will begin in Munich, West Germany and move on to Italy for extended visits in Florence, Rome, Ravenna and Venice before concluding in Innsbruck, Austria.

An alternate six-day excursion, Aug. 7-13, to Paris is also available.

Another Susquehanna at Oxford program is a course on British Theatre in London, June 1-27.

Costs for the Susquehanna at Oxford programs are $975 for the British Theatre course, $2,950 for the Oxford Summer Session, including the pre-session excursion; $1,175 for the 19-day-post-session tour, and $335 for the six-day post-session tour. Airfare is extra.

For more information and applications for any of the programs, contact Dr. Robert L. Bradford, Director, Susquehanna at Oxford Program, Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, PA 17870.

The application deadline is March 25.
