

CampusCruiser arrives at Wesleyan

By PAUL DeGATEGNO
and WEIMIN WANG

Thanks to the Title III grant, this coming fall all the students at North Carolina Wesleyan College will be able to check their emails, class schedules and announcements, course information, and grades in one place with a learning portal called CampusCruiser. All these will be done in a personalized and password protected web environment.

As a part of the Title III initiative, Wesleyan College recently purchased CampusCruiser developed by TimeCruiser, Inc. to upgrade its web-based educational operations to meet growing needs. The site (<http://prod.campuscruiser.com/nwc/>) is expected to be up and running before the fall semester.

What does all this mean?

CampusCruiser is an integrated web site or learning portal that provides a single point of access for all the campus activities. If you have used Yahoo or AOL, you may know you can personalize the content and make everything readily available on one page. With CampusCruiser, you can do that too. Below is a brief introduction of some features of CampusCruiser.

For the students, you can access all the course websites you are taking from different professors from one starting page. You don't have to learn how to navigate a course web site each time you take a new course because all the courses will have a consistent and standard format. You can chat with your class members live. You can post messages to the class message board. You can share the Word document or PowerPoint presentations with your classmates. Moreover, you can create your own website using templates so you don't have to know html or FrontPage. You can also share photo albums with your fellow students and family members. Another feature is that you will be able to check your transcripts online.

For the faculty, you can easily set up a course web site anywhere (not just in your offices any more). You can use templates to post your course syllabi, class calendar, assignments, shared files, and class links. You can use message board and chat room to communicate with students. You can also send emails to class members without having to set up a distribution list. One exciting feature is the ability to access nearly all Colleague data with a user-friendlier interface. The CampusCruiser site will also provide web access to the Colleague data when you are speaking with your advisees.

Sound exciting? Don't forget to explore more features of CampusCruiser when it is ready this fall.
