OUR COVER

We're beginning to wonder who'd make the news if there were no Adams-Millis employees. Recently, the daughters of two of our employees have made the local and state headlines more interesting reading! We believe our cover pictures substantiate this statement.

Ann Davis Hancock, Miss Salisbury of 1955, is the talented daughter of Mrs. Maude Hancock, Plant #2. After winning over 16 other contestants to become Miss Salisbury, Ann went on to win out in the Talent Division in the Miss North Carolina competition. As reward for her achievement, she was given a trip to Miami Beach for herself and a com-

EARLY ADVICE IS IMPORTANT!

In this business, everybody's work is related to everybody else's work!

Absence by any member of the personnel from his or her job can disrupt the work of others and cause delays that will raise costs and hurt sales.

Whenever a co-worker is forced by illness or some other unavoidable cause to be absent from work, immediately getting word to the foreman or department head will enable arrangements to be made that will avoid confusion and loss of time by others.

panion. She took her mother, who tells us they had a wonderful stay at the Blue Waters Hotel. We're proud of you, Ann, and hope that next year will find you up another notch on the beauty ladder!

Anne Hulin, daughter of Robert P. Hulin of Plant #7, is Miss High Point of 1955. The 5' 7" blond easily won over the 9 local entries. Though she was not among the Miss North Carolina finalists this year, she has gained experience which will be a definite asset to her next year. Anne will be a Guilford College sophomore this fall and resides with her family at 622 W. Lexington Avenue.
