Know what to do for a drowning person if you can't swim? The Institute For Safer Living warns, don't make it a double drowning by going in. Throw the victim a rope, try to reach him with a branch, push a board or log out to him. If you go for help, be sure to line up on the shore two sticks or four stones to get a fix on the exact spot where the person was last seen.

JIM MANNING

James P. Manning has been named to succeed H. E. Newham, who has resigned. Mr. Manning has been with Adams-Millis Corporation in the High Point Office in the capacity of stylist and in charge of merchandising. He has also acted as liaison between Adams-Millis and its customers.

Manning has had a wide range of experience in the hosiery field. A native of New York City, he attended New York University and graduated in merchandising and retailing. Prior to joining Adams-Millis Corporation, he was hosiery buyer for General Retail Corporation, composed of approximately 450 retail stores.
