

OUR SERVICE MEN

WILSON

Arthur M. Wilson, now of the U. S. Marine Corps, visited in our plants recently while on leave from his base at Paris Island, S. C. Arthur, former knitter at Plant #1, entered service on September 2, 1955, and has completed his basic training. He returned to Paris Island for further training.

Marine Sgt. Limuel A. Nance took part in a major amphibious exercise on the southeast coast of the U. S. with the 2nd Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C. The exercise, involving 80 ships, 347 aircraft and 42,000 Navy and Marine Corps personnel, began October 19 and was climaxed by an amphibious assault on Onslow Beach, N. C., November 3. Supported by ships of the Atlantic Fleet, the Marines landed by helicopters, surface craft, sea planes, land planes and submarines. They were opposed by a simulated force of Marine "aggressor" troops. The maneuver provided realistic training in all phases of amphibious warfare, including the simulated use of offensive and defensive atomic weapons.

Sgt. Nance was a boarder at Plant #4 at the time he entered the Marine Corps in February of 1953.

Dear Mr. Snotherly,

I thought I would drop a line to thank you for sending the AMCO News. I sure did enjoy reading it. I know I read it through at least five times. I got a big kick out of the way the knitters at #7 were dressing in "Bermudas."

Well, I'm finishing up Jump School this week. I jumped once Tuesday, once yesterday and twice today. I've got to make another one tomorrow and I'll get my "wings" Saturday morning. I guess you're wondering how I like jumping. Well, I like it just fine except for one thing. I can't figure out why there's such a rough ending to such a smooth ride. I get a few more aching bones every time I jump.

Well, that's about all for now. I'm looking forward to the next AMCO.

Sincerely,
Bill Chniel

R. M. ("Slim") Boyles, Plant #7 Boarding Foreman, was presented a pen and pencil set by the employees of his department on October 29, the occasion of his 25th anniversary with Adams-Millis Corporation. Making the presentation is Troy Hinshaw. Looking on are Helen Meredith and Jack Kinsey.
