The success of the April 19-20 visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile was due in a large measure to the employees of Adams-Millis Corporation. For our 97 solicited donors, our thanks must go to our Gray Ladies who, with tireless effort, contacted each employee and requested that he give a pint of blood, if possible. Working in our English Street plants were Edith Love, Ethel Fitts and Margye Martin, all of Plant #2; while working in our Grimes Street plant were Inez Cannon and Carrie Jones, of Plant #1.

The program of volunteer service performed by our Gray Ladies is a very extensive one; their duties are many and varied. High Point can boast of 125 Ladies in number, and the local program has been suited to our own community needs. In the hospital, the Ladies serve as receptionists, surgical escorts, and are always ready to lend a helping hand. They work at the Bloodmobile on its periodic visits to our city. They visit shut-ins. And they visit and work with the veterans at the V. A. Hospital in Salisbury. These are their regular duties. In addition, they are always happy to help with any special project. Recently, they have been called on to staff one of the North Carolina Health Department's mobile X-ray units, and last fall to help with the polio inoculation program in the city schools.

How are they renumerated for their services? Materially, by one bar on their sleeve for each year of service (75 hours, or more) and one chevron for every four years of service. However, there is no measure for the inner satisfaction gained from this wonderful program of service so faithfully and selflessly carried out.
