Corporation, heads the department which processes information reported from throughout the plants and offices.

This information is keyed into data-entry machines, then stored in the Corporation's computer. Later this data is utilized for reports covering every aspect of the Corporation's business, for such areas as production, sales and accounting.

Also under Jim's supervision are the Corporation's Print Shop and the private telephone system, which Adams-Millis owns and operates throughout the Corporate Office and the plants in North Carolina.

Jim is a graduate of Florida State University and has studied at the University of North Carolina Graduate School.

Iris Marshall, now Assistant Secretary of the Corporation, first came to work in 1950 as a secretary. Since 1970, she has been executive secretary to Mr. Millis and Mr. Mewborne.

Iris holds the Certified Professional Secretary Certificate, which she was awarded last year. To qualify for this, the applicant must undergo two days of examinations that cover all phases of secretarial duties, from financial accounting to office procedures.

As Assistant Secretary of the Corporation, Iris handles all correspondence with shareholders and assists with mailing shareholder proxy materials and the Annual and Quarterly Reports. She also attends the Annual Meetings of Stockholders to report on proxy tabulations. She is a Notary Public for the Corporation.

George Harris and Curtis Martin, both Certified Public Accountants, are the Corporate Accounting Supervisors. They are responsible for all areas of corporate accounting, including all accounts payable and receivable and are concerned with all financial information on buildings, machinery and other equipment owned by the Corporation. Consolidation of financial data for monthly operating reports, quarterly and annual reports, as well as reports for the Securities Exchange Commission and forecasts of future operations, are other areas included in their duties.

George is a graduate of East Carolina University at Greenville, and Curtis graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Mack D. Harris is Operations Manager of Information Services and directly supervises the computer operators, programmers and control clerks.

Mack commented that the Adams-Millis computer, which occupies a 25 by 28-foot climate-controlled room in the Corporate Office building, is capable of storing 420 million characters (individual figures or letters) on magnetic disks. Information stored covers such areas as accounts payable, accounts receivable, production and cost reports, orders and invoices.

As an example of the speed with which the computer works, Mack mentioned that as many as 65,000 production tickets from employees can be computed in approximately an hour. This includes employee pay and weekly production reports.

Before becoming Operations Manager, Mack had worked in other phases of data processing. He has completed a number of special courses relating to his work.

Gerry Bailey is Assistant Operations Manager Information Services. She has been with Adams-Millis 24 years and previously worked as Key Punch Operator, Computer Operator, and Shift Supervisor in Information Services.

Vickie Miller is Data Entry Supervisor in Information Services and is responsible for distributing the work in this department to data entry operators. These operators work at machines which have keyboards similar to a typewriter. The information they punch on these keyboards is transferred to magnetic tape to be processed by the computer. This information includes data concerning production, payroll, group insurance, orders, accounts payable, accounts receivable, shipping and billing information.

Prior to being promoted to her present position, Vickie was Assistant Scheduling Manager at Adams-Millis Texturing and Dyeing.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN L. FARRINGTON, SR.

John had been with Adams-Millis for 32 years and last worked as security guard at Plant #3 in Kernersville. In 1975, he retired from the Boarding Department after 32 years of service, but had returned to employment with the Company in 1976.
