DUKE ELLINGTON

Duke Will Play April 30 Concert

Internationally famous band leader Duke Ellington is scheduled to make his debut at North Carolina College on Monday, April 30, under the sponsorship of the North Carolina College Law School.

The Law School is reportedly presenting the Ellington concert for the purpose of raising money for the scholarship fund.

Ellington, one of the foremost exponents of jazz today, has played in concert in some of the major concert stages across the nation. Among the cities in which he has played are Cleveland, Boston, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and Chicago.

The Duke is an annual attraction at the Philharmonic in Los Angeles, the Civic Opera in Chicago, the Academy Hall in Philadelphia and a host of others.

In the opinion of many, Duke's concert activities have won him an audience of the widest scope and established the crown of leadership on his head more firmly than at any time in his career.

Speakers Discuss Religion Here

NCC's Annual Religious Emphasis Week is now in progress here. The week is being highlighted by the appearance of speakers from various sections of the country.

"Religious Emphasis Week offers a special opportunity to search the roots of our convictions. Six strong personalities will be our guests to share in this experience. Let us join them in wrestling with the problems of God and the universe of human life and human destiny," Dr. J. Neal Hughley, College Minister said last week.

The six speakers, five of whom will make radio appearances at WDNC, are all professional people who have had "rich lifelike" experiences.

Reverend Harry E. Smith, minister to Presbyterian students, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, spoke in the music assembly March 25 at 9:30 a.m.

Dr. Richard I. McKinney, professor and head of Department of Philosophy, Morgan State College, Baltimore, spoke in B. N. Duke March 25 at 4:30 p.m.

Students, School OK Constitution

By ROBERT PERRY
Graduate and professional students, after the current term, will no longer be entitled to such privileges as free admission to lyceum attractions, SG dances, and athletic contests.

Beginning next September, students must have at least a 1.5 average in order to run for the top student elective offices on campus.

These are two of the important changes that will soon go into effect here as a result of the newly ratified Student Government Constitution.

The Constitution was signed on February 9 by Presider A. Elder, Dean Turner, chairman of the Student Welfare Committee; Sherman Perry, SG prexy, and Henry Fair, vice president of the Student Government.

Student Government files reveal that Calvin Norman, who was president of the SG in 1951-52, was the first to initiate work on the constitution. Every Student Government since that time has done something toward drawing up the Constitution. Thus, the recent ratification brings to an end five years of work by five different governments.

However, the present document is quite different from others that have been drawn up since 1951, the most significant difference having to do with separating the graduate and undergraduate students. The constitution applies exclusively to undergraduates. Graduate students will no longer be required to pay activity fees, and they will not be entitled to receive

Summer School Announces Plans

NCC's Summer Session will run from June 11 through August 4, this was revealed here today in a release from the office of Dr. J. H. Taylor, Director.

As usual, the summer program will be divided into three sessions, a six weeks term featuring workshops and clinics, a nine weeks term which will afford a variety of undergraduate and graduate courses, and a concentrated three week post session.

Among workshops being offered during the June 11-July 19 session are those in Audio-Visual Aids, Health Education, Reading, Resource-Use Education, Social Studies, Alcoholic Education, Family Relations, Mental Health, Special Education, Juvenile Probation Work, and the annual workshop for Principals.

Some 125 undergraduate and graduate courses will be handled by 60 instructors in the nine weeks term offering work credit toward graduation or certification. Students may earn four and one-half quarter hours in the post-session.

According to Dr. Taylor, the Summer School will offer a rich and varied program of cultural and recreational activities.

Bullock Lands Fulbright Award

Emma Bullock, an honor student from Tarboro, has been granted a United States Educational Exchange Award to spend one year studying French at the University of Aix-Marseille in France.

The twenty-year old French major and the second NCC co-ed in history to receive a Fulbright grant, will study both the French language and literature during the tenure of her fellowship award.

The grant received by the NCC co-ed was among those given under the provision of the Fulbright Act. Administered by the State Department's International Exchange Service, the awards program is designed to promote a better understanding of the United States in other countries.

According to a release by the Fulbright Selection Committee, the Fulbright program is de-

Four of the architects of the Campus Echo Publications Conference are shown above examining a map of North Carolina. They are extending invitations to newspaper and yearbook students and advisers in all high schools in the state. Walter Davis, Coordinator, explains the process while H. G. Echo To Host News Conference

Student journalists and their advisers from high schools all over North Carolina have been invited to attend a one-day Publications Conference here on April 20.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m., and the closing feature will be a 7-9 p.m. social.

Designed to improve the quality of high school publications, the conference is being sponsored by the Campus Echo

According to Shirley James, Echo editor, the conference is designed to attract workers on both newspapers and yearbooks. Those schools without publications are being invited, Miss James said, as instruction will be given on how to organize, finance and sustain newspapers and yearbooks.

Some 250 high schools have been invited to participate, the Echo editor said.

The conference will be divided into sections - one on newspapers and the other on yearbooks.

The newspaper section will be directed by a battery of Echo staffers and professional journalists from Durham vicinity. It will deal with such problems as getting a paper started, organizing a staff, advertising, interviewing, editing, writing news, features, editorials and sports, photography, lay-out, and proof-reading. There will also be a session for advisers.

The yearbook section, which will be handled by a member of the staff of the American Yearbook Company, will give instructions in organizing a yearbook staff, lay-out, photography, financing, promoting, qualities and styles available in yearbooks, typography, and advising.

There will also be a series of panel discussions in the afternoon at which time the visiting students will air their problems.

Registration fee has been set at $1.00 per delegate. Meals will be served in the NCC dining hall. And the social will take place in the Women's Gymnasium.

The Campus Echo photographer caught Emma Bullock in the post office just after she got the news of her selection as a Fulbright Scholar to study in France next year. The young NCC co-ed is from Tarboro.
