

CIAA Operations

By HAROLD FOSTER
— The Revamped C.I.A.A. —

The Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which had its beginning in 1912, has been revamped in more ways than one. Not only has it increased from the original four-college membership (Howard, Hampton, Lincoln U. and Virginia U.), to the present 17-member organization, but has been cited as one of the nation's most efficient athletic conferences among small colleges; it has produced many All-American athletes; and has been represented in national competition by many of its champions.

Colleges that are presently members of the C.I.A.A. follow: A&T College in Greensboro, N. C.; Delaware State of Delaware; Elizabeth City Teachers College in Elizabeth City, N. C.; Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va; Howard University in Washington, D. C.; Johnson C. Smith, Charlotte, N. C.; Lincoln University, Phil. Penn.; Maryland State, Princess Anne, Maryland; Morgan State College, Baltimore, Maryland; North Carolina College at Durham, Durham, N. C.; St. Augustine's, Raleigh, N. C.; St. Paul College, Lawrenceville, Virginia; Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C.; Virginia State, Petersburg, Virginia; Virginia Union, Richmond, Virginia; and Winston-Salem Teachers College, Winston-Salem, N. C.

EAGLES' FOOTBALL SCHEDULE FOR '60

North Carolina College, after winning its season's opener, could very well be cited as the "dark-horse" in the colleges' bid for the C.I.A.A. football championship laurels.

Although weak at the end positions, Coach Riddick's talented Eagles will be strong up the middle as long as their pre-season All-American James Brewington, 295-pound tackle, and Luther Jeralds, 250-pound guard, stay in good playing condition.

In the backfield, the Eagles' running will be focused on pre-season All-American Rossie Barfield, 190-pound halfback; and Reginald Pryor, the field general.

Lee Calhoun, champion hurdler

Here briefly is a run-down of other CIAA football teams who will be 1960 foes of the Eagles.

MORGAN STATE

After having lost by retirement their coach, Eddie Hurt, after 31 years of service, and their 1959 backfield personnel, the Morgan Bears, under new coach Earl Banks, will be out to better the one-sided record (1-7) which still hangs on them from last year.

The Bears will be host to NCC on October 1, at Baltimore.

SAINT AUGUSTINE'S

The St. Aug. Falcons will be in a re-building stage after losing most of last year's players via graduation.

The Falcons had a profitable season last year with a 7-2 record. They will meet NCC Oct. 8, here in Durham.

VIRGINIA STATE

A 47-0 first game licking by Central State, should not be a hindrance to Virginia having a good club this year.

Smarting a last seasons' 7-2 record, the Trojans should be a top contender for the CIAA prize, with a veteran ball club and the best all-around CIAA quarterback in De Wayne Jeter.

NCC will travel to Petersburg on October 5, for the football encounter.

MARYLAND STATE

This year will be no exception for the Hawks of Maryland State — with potentially three of the best running backs in the CIAA in Dan Miller, Billy Gray and 220-pound fullback Charlie Holmes; the Hawks will again have a good ball club and will be a top contender for the CIAA crown.

The Hawks will be entertained by the Eagles on October 22 at O'Kelly Field.

SHAW

With the same personnel as last year, and a new coach in Robert "Stonewall" Jackson, the Shaw Bears are out to avenge their 1-6-1 record of last year. They should do it with the conference's leading pass receiver of the last two years in Glen Knight.

October 29, Shaw entertains North Carolina College Eagles in Raleigh.

VIRGINIA UNION

Sportcasters have said, "Without a doubt, this is the team to watch." The Union Panthers, with the conference's best all-around team, and with one of the most dangerous runners in the conference in 220-pound halfback Hezekiah Braxton, is definitely one of the top contenders for the CIAA crown.

North Carolina College will play host to Virginia Union on November 12. Should be a good one!

Hurdler Wins Olympic Medal

By Joseph A. Goodwater

Lee Calhoun, the former North Carolina College hurdler and 1956 Olympic gold medalist, employed by Gary, Indiana's recreation department, won his second Olympic gold medal in the 1960 Olympic games held at Rome, Italy. The roars of the enthused crowd went to Calhoun as he stormed ahead of the pack to break the tape in the Olympic time of 13.8 (thirteen and eight tenths seconds) for the 110-meter high hurdles. The former North Carolina College speedster whipped Willie May and the Eastern Michigan flash Hayes Jones along with Martin Lauer of Germany in that order.

Formerly, the Indiana gazelle had dipped into the tape equaling the world record time of Germany's Martin Lauer which is 13.2 (thirteen and two-tenths seconds). Calhoun tied the world mark at Bern, Switzerland, August 21, 1960 in a prewarm up, Olympic meet. The United States track coaches stated that the record performance definitely put Calhoun at this time in the top favored spot for an Olympic gold medal, which indeed came to pass.

Calhoun was coached by North Carolina College's Leroy T. Walker who also assisted the American high hurdlers at Rome. Coach Walker is noted internationally for his great knowledge of hurdling and track techniques.

Coach Leroy T. Walker and Lee Calhoun agree that no one who goes out for track merely for the participation in some form of athletics achieves any real measure of success in the sport. Complete dedication is the key to eventual victory and mastering of track. Dedication means unquestioning adherence to training rules and the willingness to endure tremendous physical exertion for what may appear to be little gain.

Lee put himself through tremendous exertion and physical agony in order to achieve the fitness of technique which he desired in hurdling competition. Lee says that it was "pure torture" day in and day out and that a well-disciplined athlete knows that athletic success is "ninety-nine percent perspiration and one percent inspiration."

Calhoun's wife, Gwendolyn Bannister, a former Eagle also, accompanied Calhoun to Rome. She was sponsored there by her home town, Gary, Indiana.

A&T COLLEGE

The Aggies, defending CIAA champions for the last two years, are picked to repeat as conference champs.

Although weak at quarterback and guard, the Aggies have 19 lettermen returning, and two of the nation's finest running backs in the Florida Ponies, Gene Cambridge and Joe Taylor. The quarterbacking will be handled by talented but inexperienced, James Mitchell.
