NCC And Duke Students March On Chapel Hill

175 Demonstrate Support For Public Accommodations

Over 175 North Carolina College and Duke University students and faculty members marched 13 miles in sub-freezing weather Sunday, January 12, to dramatize their support for Chapel Hill's proposed public accommodations law, which was defeated the following Monday night by a 4-2 aldermen vote.

The marchers made their "sacrifice for freedom" by trudging from NCC's B. N. Duke Auditorium to the Negro First Baptist Church in Chapel Hill where a freedom rally was held.

The group was met at Eastgate Shopping Center by another 175 UNC students and townspeople. The entire group walked the final miles to the church.

Traffic slowed to a crawl on U.S. Highway 15-501 as curiosity seekers and integration leaders stopped to watch.

The four-hour march was a quiet one except for two minor incidents. One involved heckling by members of UNC's ATO fraternity house. The other almost led to blows when a man who identified himself as the Grand Dragon of the North Carolina Ku Klux Klan threatened to assault a cameraman who took his picture.

Police said no arrest were made during the march.

The marchers carried signs saying, "Freedom Now," and (See MARCH, page 2)

Judge Lawson Tells Students To Prepare

A District of Columbia juvenile court judge Monday told North Carolina College students that they must be prepared to be flexible, adventurous, and well-trained if they are to succeed in a growing, changing, and complex young world.

Associate Judge Marjorie McKenzie Lawson of the District of Columbia Juvenile Court, addressing the NCC Forum assembly, urged preparation "to the teeth" as one step toward achieving success in the years ahead.

Judge Lawson, who was appointed to the bench by the late President John F. Kennedy in 1962, was the first Negro woman in history to be appointed by a President and approved by the Senate to a statutory appointment.

Using a text from a sermon and a prayer, both from James Baldwin's play "Blues for Mr. Charlie," and both comprising an editorial in the January, (See JUDGE TELLS, page 4)

NCC FACULTY MEMBERS OBSERVE a power supply unit which will be used in electro-phoretic studies during two National Science Foundation-sponsored summer science programs here.

Dr. Theodore R. Speigner Elected To Durham City Board Of Education

Dr. Theodore R. Speigner, chairman of the North Carolina College Department of Geography and director of the college's Division of Resource-Use Education, Monday was elected by the Durham City Council to the City Board of Education.

The election fills a vacancy left by the death last year of D. Eric Moore, dean of the NCC School of Library Science, who was the second Negro ever elected to the Board.

Dr. Speigner, who is regarded as one of the nation's foremost conservation educators, has headed the North Carolina College Division of Resource-

Use Education for 15 years. A teacher of the social sciences at the college since 1948, he was appointed professor of geography in September of 1963.

A native of Montgomery, Alabama, he was educated in the Montgomery public schools and completed his secondary work in the high school department of the Alabama State College. He holds the B.A. degree from Talladega College, the M.A. degree from the State University of Iowa the Ph.D. degree from the University of Iowa, the Ph.D. degree from the University of Michigan, and the LL.D. degree from Luther College.

In 1961 when he was awarded the Ph.D. degree, he became the first Negro in the United States to receive the doctorate in conservation and conservation (See DR. SPEIGNER, page 3)

Doris F. Greene In Sr. Piano Recital

Doris F. Greene was presented by the North Carolina College Department of Music in her senior recital, January 9 in B. N. Duke Auditorium.

The concert consisted of six pieces and was highlighted at its terminal point with the Concerto No. 1 in E. Flat by Liszt. This piece was performed by Miss Greene and her piano instructor Mrs. Ruth H. Gillum.

Following the recital a reception was given in the New Residence Hall. In the receiving line were Miss Doris Greene, Dean L. M. Latham, Dean of Women at North Carolina College, Mrs. Ethel V. Greene, Mother of Doris Greene, and Mrs. Ruth H. Gillum.

Miss Greene, a native of Statesville, North Carolina and a music major at North Carolina College at Durham has completed her studies here and plans to enter the New England Conservatory in Boston, Massachusetts during the month of February.

Dean Brown Says College Education Key To More $ $

Dr. William H. Brown, Dean of the Graduate School, said that higher education is prerequisite for financial well being as he spoke before the upper-classman assembly recently.

Dean Brown, who spoke on the subject "Poor Man, Rich Man, Beggar Man, Scholar," said a person who quits his education at the high school level will earn around $150,000 during his lifetime, while a person with three years of college will earn around $263,000 during his lifetime.

He also said that a college (See DEAN SAYS, page 4)

Summer Programs To Get Money

North Carolina College President Samuel P. Massie announced recently that the institution has been awarded grants totaling $93,689.75 by the National Science Foundation for the conduct of two concurrent science programs during the summer of 1964.

A grant of $77,625 will support the college's eighth Summer Institute in Science and Mathematics for Junior and Senior High School Teachers of Science and Mathematics.

A Summer Science Training Program for High Ability Secondary School Students will be supported by a grant of $16,064.75.

Both programs begin June 8 and end July 18.

Summer Science Institute

Eighty junior and senior high school teachers will be selected to participate in the six-week institute, to be directed by Dr. Walter H. Pattillo, Jr., chairman of the college's Department of Biology.

Offering courses in biology, chemistry, and mathematics, the institute is designed especially for teachers whose college training in these subjects does not exceed two years. According to Dr. Pattillo, preference will be given teachers who have never attended an institute and those having current teaching schedules consisting of at least 50 percent science or mathematics courses. The courses will not yield graduate credit as in past years.

Grants to individuals will include cash stipends for subsistence and will include allowances for travel and dependents. (See NCC GETS, page 3)

Dr. S. L. Render New English Prof.

Dr. S. L. Render has been announced by Dr. Samuel P. Massie, President of North Carolina College, as newly appointed Professor of English in the English Department. She was a member of the Florida A. & M. University faculty from 1950 to the close of the fall quarter in 1963.

Before entering the teaching profession in 1950, Professor Render was employed by the Ohio State Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, the U. (See RENDER ADDED, page 4)

STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS TRUDGE downhill, braving freezing rain and sleet and strong winds, on their way to a 13-mile "freedom walk" to Chapel Hill.

The marchers, some 175 of them, made the walk in four hours. They were demonstrating their support for a Chapel Hill public accommodations law which was defeated the following Monday night by a 4-2 aldermen vote.
