Student Government and Raymond Perry, the eighteenth vice-president, on Friday, September 24. Following the Inauguration the Student Body attended an inaugural ball.

The President laid out with firmness and feeling, the blueprints for a "Great New Era." A constant idea throughout the address was "Let us work together."

On the subject of Student Government philosophy, the President said that he would seek progress in a peaceful conciliatory manner. But he dispelled all doubts of timidity with these words, "But I wish to make it clear that we will never accept peace in exchange for progress."

According to the address, the Student Government will seek three goals through its program. These goals will include Academic Improvement, Adequate Social Liberties, and Good School Spirit.

In explaining why he wants to improve the college, Daye related his high school dream of NCC. He vowed that he would "not be happy until ours is the kind of college that can be loved and honored."

Dr. Samuel P. Massie,
President of NCC

Welcome to all of the members of the North Carolina College family for 1965-66.

To the members of the record breaking class of 1969, we are very pleased that you chose North Carolina College at Durham as your institution—the place where your dreams, hopes, and ambitions will materialize and begin to bear fruit. Here you will find opportunities to grow in all directions—in the classroom, in extra-class activities, in personal relationships, in spiritual and moral values, in cultural and social experiences. We strongly urge you to take full advantage of these opportunities so that you may prepare yourselves well for the glorious future that lies ahead.

To the former students returning to complete their work, we hope first that you had a pleasant summer experience. Some of you visited foreign lands, some of you attended summer school, either here or elsewhere to enrich your education, while some of you worked to increase your funds. A few very fortunate ones relaxed to improve their physical conditions. But, whatever you did, you are back and we are glad to see you.

We hope that you have returned renewed and invigorated. We hope that you have returned determined to work and study harder and to do well in and out of the classroom as you further yourselves for the needs, requirements, yes, even demands of the Great Society.

To the members of the faculty and staff joining us this year, we again express our delight that you will assist us in providing quality education for our students. We are constantly striving to improve the excellence of our education and your efforts will have much meaning in this task. We know that you, too, will find that North Carolina College is "a fine place to live, learn, work, and serve."

To our returning colleagues, we welcome you from interesting summers—in Europe, at North Carolina College, at other colleges, and other types of experiences.

The Massie family had a very pleasant and enriching summer as we journeyed west to Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico, and California.

This is the Golden Age of Education—the Age of the Great Society. As man struggles to rid himself of his ancient enemies—poverty, ignorance, and disease, he has rapidly found that his most significant weapon is education. Therefore, everywhere we find increased interest in education and increased support for it.

We who teach and learn in higher educational institutions like North Carolina College have a special opportunity and a special obligation to respond to the challenge of this age.

Therefore, each of us - administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, and friends should personally resolve to work harder this year - to do more creative planning, more inspiring and dedicated teaching, more energetic and meaningful learning.

"Life is easy for the owl, but the Eagles seeks his place in the sun."

Can we, of the 1965 family of North Carolina College, meet the needs and challenges of our age?

With that thought, I greet you again as we begin another year.

Wisconsin Two Exchange Here

North Carolina College participated this fall in the first student exchange between a Wisconsin University and a North Carolina Negro institution, when two sophomores from the University of Wisconsin Marinette County Center enrolled for the first semester at North Carolina College.

Upon return to Marinette at the end of the semester, they will be accompanied by two N. C. C. students. These girls will attend classes at the Marinette County Center for the spring semester.
