

DUKE TECH WINS AGAIN—The Duke Tech basketball team, composed mostly of Medical Center employes, has begun the six-team Bull City league season. At left, Marvin Nunn sinks a lay-up while a defender watches. At right, Jimmie Manley, the team's player-coach, talks with the members during a time out. Members of the team include Ronald Burton, Percy Carrington, William Foy, Robert Jackson, James Jiggett, Ronald Johnson, William Joiner, Sylvester Lassiter, Fred Mosely, Marvin Nunn, Jimmy Pemberton, Herman Watson, Bubba Lyons, A. D. Peace, and Bobby Weaver. (staff photo)

Provost Announces 5 Faculty Changes

Dr. Marcus E. Hobbs, University provost, last month announced five faculty changes at the Medical Center.

He named two full professors, two associate professors and an assistant professor.

Dr. Leonard K. Goldwater, a visiting scholar in community health sciences at Duke since January, 1968, was appointed professor in the department.

Goldwater was professor of occupational medicine at the Columbia University School of Medicine before beginning his work at Duke. A native of New York City, he received his A. B. degree in 1924 from the University of Michigan and his M. D. in 1928 from New York University. Dr. Goldwater also holds a doctor of medical science degree and an M. S. in public health.

Named professor of physical therapy was Dr. Miriam Jacobs. Director of physical therapy since her appointment at Duke in 1968, Miss Jacobs is also assistant professor of anatomy.

She received her B. A. degree from Seaton Hill College and completed the curriculum in physical therapy at the D. T. Watson School of the University of Pittsburgh. She later earned an M. S. degree in anatomy at Pittsburgh and was awarded the Ph. D. degree in the same field at the University of Alabama in 1966.

The two new associate professors are in otolaryngology and psychiatry.

Dr. Patrick D. Kenan, at Duke since 1960, was promoted from assistant to associate professor in the division of otolaryngology of the Department of Surgery.

He served his internship at Watts Hospital in Durham and completed his residency training at Duke.

A native of Okmulgee, Okla., Kenan earned his B. S. degree in mathematics from the University of Oklahoma in 1952 and his M. D. from Duke in 1959.

Promoted from assistant to associate professor of psychiatry was Dr. Eric A. Pfeiffer. Pfeiffer came to Duke as an associate in psychiatry in 1966 and was named assistant professor in 1967.

Born in Rauental, Germany, Pfeiffer earned both A. B. and M. D. degrees at Washington University in St. Louis. He served his psychiatric residency at the University of Rochester in New York.

Dr. Daniel T. Gianturco, assistant professor of psychiatry since July, 1968, has been given the additional title of assistant professor of community health sciences.

He completed his undergraduate and medical education at the University of Buffalo in 1956 and 1960, respectively. He did his residency at Duke and has also served as instructor and associate in psychiatry. He was named director of the Day Unit at Duke in 1967 and became chief of psychiatry's office of computer sciences in 1968.