Terry Sanford Inauguration Planned Sunday

With a flourish of academic pageantry, Duke University's sixth president, Terry Sanford, will officially be installed October 18.

Some 60,000 printed invitations to the inauguration ceremonies were sent out earlier this month to individuals affiliated in some way with the University. These included faculty, students, employees, alumni, and other friends of Duke in addition to the members of the Board of Trustees and representatives of some 250 other colleges and universities.

The actual inauguration is set for 3:30 p.m. Sunday on the main campus quadrangle with an informal reception following. An inaugural banquet is scheduled for Saturday evening, October 17, and a special chapel service and luncheon are planned the day of the program.

The ceremony will begin with an academic procession followed by the national anthem. The Rev. Robert E. Cushman, dean of the Duke Divinity School, will give the invocation, and Dean Kenneth Pye, University chancellor, will welcome guests.

They will be followed by a series of "greeters" who will offer their welcome to the new president. They include representatives of the Duke student body, the faculty, the Employee's Council, alumni organizations, and the North Carolina Methodist Conference. Also on the program are North Carolina Governor Robert Scott and Durham Mayor R. Wense Grabarek.

After a blessing by the Rev. James Cleland, dean of Duke Chapel, Mr. Sanford will address the crowd.

Mr. Sanford, who was governor of the state of North Carolina from 1961 to 1965, was named Duke's sixth president by the trustees last December. He assumed his presidential duties in April.

Personnel Building Open

The employment, wage and salary and training sections of the Medical Center personnel department have moved into their new quarters on Erwin Road.

For the past several months the Medical Center's wage and salary and training functions have been conducted from offices in the Pickens Rehabilitation Building after space limitations made necessary the temporary relocation of the employment offices.

The new building, which is located adjacent to the Hanes House Annex, was under construction for three months. It was completed last week.

The building contains 1,700 square feet of space and provides working space for 13 employees.

All employment procedures including interviews, testing and the preparation of pre-employment health records are being conducted in the new facility.

A parking area at the rear of the new building provides space for 20 automobiles.

Employee Health and Student Health, formerly located at the hospital, are occupying the space in the Pickens Building vacated by the employment division.
