Chorus Schedules Concert

The Duke Hospital Chorus, 30 employees who are full of energy and rarin' to sing, will present a second concert on Friday, November 13, in the Music Room of the East Duke Building.

The chorus, organized for about seven months, gave its first program September 11. Intercom later got this letter from the Medical Center personnel director.

I've heard the song 'The Best Things in Life Are Free' and on Friday, September 11, I saw what the song meant. On that evening the Duke Medical Center Chorus presented their first in a series of programs for employees and patients in the Medical Center amphitheater. Highlights of the evening were solos by William McDuffie and Ernie Hawthorne as well as a quartet who, among other things, told the comedy story of the preacher and the bear in song.

About 125 employees and patients attended the event and I can truly say that a lot of employees at Duke Medical Center lost an opportunity to have a relaxing evening of entertainment. The next time they give a program you'll have an opportunity to see for yourself what a group of employees can do with a little encouragement.

Robert C. Tuthill

Anyone interested in joining the chorus should attend the rehearsals held each Monday and Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. in Room 214-A Baker House. More concerts are planned during the Christmas season.
