9 Academic Changes Announced
Duke University Provost Frederic N. Cleveland has announced nine faculty changes in the Medical Center. The group included one new full professor, two associate professors, and six assistant professors.

Named professor of surgery was Dr. Delford L. Stickel, an associate professor in the department since 1966. Dr. Stickel received his A.B. and M.D. degrees from Duke and also completed his internship and residency here before joining the staff as assistant professor of surgery in 1957. He is presently chief of staff at the Durham VA Hospital.

The new associate professors are Dr. Rayford S. Jones in the Department of Surgery and C. Craig Harris in the Department of Radiology.

Dr. Jones comes to Duke from a post as assistant professor of surgery at the University of California in San Francisco. A native of Texas, he earned his undergraduate degree from the University of Texas and received his M.D. from the Texas Medical Branch in 1961. He did postdoctoral training at hospitals in Cleveland and returned to Duke as a resident before joining the staff.

Appointed assistant professor of anesthesiology was Dr. Luther C. Hollandsworth, who comes to Duke from a post as an assistant professor at UNC in Chapel Hill. He is a graduate of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine and is a past president of the N.C. Society of Anesthesiologists.
