

Four on Faculty Named Full Professors

Four medical center faculty members have been promoted to full professor, according to an announcement by Dr. Frederic N. Cleaveland, university provost.

Two of the professors are members of the Department of Ophthalmology. They are Dr. William Banks Anderson Jr. and Dr. Maurice B. Landers III.

Dr. John V. Salzano was promoted in the Department of Physiology and Pharmacology, and Dr. Samuel A. Wells was promoted in the Department of Surgery.

Anderson earned an A.B. degree from Princeton University in 1952 and an M.D. from Harvard Medical School in 1956. After completing an internship in surgery at Duke in 1957, he served for two years as captain in the U.S. Army Medical Corps in Washington, D.C., and Munich, Germany.

The Durham native returned to Duke in 1959 to enter the ophthalmology residency program, and he joined the faculty in 1962. Retinal physiology is his primary research interest.

DR. ANDERSON

In 1959, Landers earned an A.B. degree, also from Princeton, and in 1963, he received his M.D. from the University of Michigan Medical School. He completed an internship at U.M. Hospital the following year and then spent three years at the University of California at Los Angeles in the Jules Stein Eye Institute as an ophthalmology resident.

Before his appointment at Duke in 1969, Landers was director of the U.S. Army Laser Medical Research Laboratory in Philadelphia. Most recently, his scientific studies have centered on lasers and retinitis pigmentosa, a currently incurable disease leading to blindness.

Salzano was awarded an A.B. degree in biology from St. Vincent College in Latrobe, Pa., in 1950, a master's degree, also in biology, from Boston College in 1952 and a Ph.D. in physiology from the State University of Iowa in 1956.

DR. LANDERS

He joined the Duke faculty the same year as an instructor in the Department of Physiology and Pharmacology. Since August of 1975, he has served as acting chairman of that department.

His research is directed toward understanding factors that influence and regulate the respiratory and circulatory systems of man and animals.

Wells earned both his bachelor's and medical degrees from Emory University, in 1957 and 1961, respectively. He was an intern and resident in internal medicine at Johns Hopkins University from 1961 to 1963, and the following year he was a surgical resident at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis.

He then spent two years as clinical associate in the Surgical Branch of the National Cancer Institute and three years as a surgical resident at Duke. In 1970 he was appointed assistant professor of surgery at Duke and in 1975 he was named director of the medical center's Clinical Research Unit.

His current scientific studies are in breast cancer and endocrinology.

Nurses Begin Anesthesia Study

Fifteen registered nurses from eight states are enrolled in the 24-month nurse anesthesia program that began yesterday.

Established in 1931 by the Department of Anesthesiology, the program teaches the physiopharmacological effects of anesthesia and related drugs, the proper techniques for their administration and the management of a treatment plan for patients requiring anesthesia.

Mary B. Campbell, Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist, is director of the program.

Participants are:

ALABAMA — Randall J. Johnson, Birmingham.

FLORIDA — Ana Marie Miquel, Gainesville, and David Lynn Paulson, Hialeah.

GEORGIA — Michele M. Mason, Atlanta, and Marie Estelle Schlenk, Marietta.

ILLINOIS — Steven Etcheson, Springfield.

KENTUCKY — Richard L. Dickens, Lexington.

MISSOURI — Ernest J. Tacchi, St. Louis.

NORTH CAROLINA — Ellen Bohannon Featherstone, Raleigh; Rebecca Jensen, Havelock; Audrey C. Page, Jacksonville; Terry B. Sanders, Durham; Amos H. Smith, Lexington; and Wayne Hamm, Durham.

TENNESSEE — Willard T. Roberson, Memphis.

Visitor Talks on Nursing Homes

Dr. Morton A. Lieberman, professor of behavioral sciences and psychology at the University of Chicago, will speak on "Survival in a Nursing Home: Evaluating Pre-Institutional Factors" at the medical center on Thursday, Jan. 13.

His talk, which is open to the public without charge, will begin at 4 p.m. in Room 1504 of the Gerontology Building. It will last approximately one hour.

Lieberman is considered an authority on therapeutic interaction, the influence of the doctor-patient relationship on physical health and adaptation and survival under stress in the aged.

The university's Council on Aging and Human Development is sponsoring Lieberman's talk.

CAMPUS CLUB LECTURE

Prof. James D. Barber will speak on "Presidents and the Presidency" Wednesday (Jan. 12) as the first lecture in the Campus Club Lecture Series.

The four talks by members of the Duke faculty will be in the Music Room 201, East Duke Building on alternating Wednesdays at 10 a.m.

Series tickets are $4.

HOW ABOUT GIVING 450 ML. OF BLOOD?—If you are trying to keep up to date and are converting measurements to the metric system, you can leave your conversion tables at home when you go to donate a "pint" of blood Thursday (Jan. 13). The famous "pint" is actually 450 milliliters (a little less than a pint). It's collected in a container like the one shown above, but you only fill one of the plastic bags. The other two allow technicians later to separate out the plasma and the platelets, without transferring the blood to another container. Thursday's blood drive will be in the third floor dining room, 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Everyone is encouraged to participate, and special emphasis is being placed on having donors from the Department of Medicine, Director's Office, Environmental Services, Department of Radiology, Material Control, Department of Anesthesiology, Engineering and Operations and Department of Community Health Sciences.
