

Hospital Honors Its 'Magnificent Resource'

"No more prized resource is available to any institution than its volunteers," said Dr. Roscoe R. Robinson, chief executive officer of the hospital, at the annual dinner in honor of the Hospital Auxiliary.

"The auxiliary has been absolutely magnificent," Robinson said. He read a letter from the parents of a patient that included "particular thanks to the nice ladies in pink coats."

The first hospital auxiliary in North Carolina, the organization has funded numerous activities that otherwise couldn't be funded, he said, including the gift shop, snack bars, a lending library, guide service and Junior Volunteer program.

"Now we need help in a new task, thinking about new programs in planning for the move to the new Duke North Hospital," Robinson said. "As we grow larger, we must try harder to convey the feeling to patients that we really do care about patient welfare."

He said the Auxiliary could be particularly helpful in providing a perspective closer to that of the patients than to that of the professionals working here.

Ort Busse, auxiliary president, thanked the hospital administration and Dietary Services for the "lovely dinner" and presented gifts to two auxiliary members, past president Edna McCollum and Juanita Johnson, who is retiring after more than 14 years at the Red Zone snack bar.

NCME To Focus on Diabetes

A special videotape dealing with common long-term complications of diabetes will be shown by the Network for Continuing Medical Education, Wednesday, April 20 at 2 p.m. in Room M-405.

The program, entitled "Chronic Complications of Maturity-Onset Diabetes Mellitus: A Management Workshop" is designed to help physicians learn to recognize the earliest stages of complications, how they relate to one another and which are potentially reversible.

Faculty for the taped workshop are Dr. Philip Felig, Yale University School of Medicine, who will speak on "Pathophysiology"; Dr. Frederick C. Goetz, University of Minnesota Medical School, on "Renal Problems"; Dr. H. Howard Goldstein, Harvard Medical School, on Neuropathy and the Diabetic Foot; and Dr. Francis A. L'Esperance, Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, on "Retinal Complications."

The program is cosponsored by the American Diabetes Association and the Office of Graduate and Continuing Education, Yale University School of Medicine.

The telecast, workshop materials and monograph are made possible by support of Pfizer Laboratories Division.
