

Professorship Honors Dermatology Chief

A new endowed professorship in dermatology at the medical center will be created in honor of Dr. J. Lamar Callaway.

Callaway, a James B. Duke professor, the university's highest academic appointment, served as chief of the division of dermatology at the medical center for 30 years.

The announcement came from Dr. William G. Anlyan, vice president for health affairs, following approval by the Duke Board of Trustees. Anlyan said that Callaway's friends, colleagues, former students and former patients have joined with private foundations and pharmaceutical companies in contributing more than $250,000 toward the chair.

Fund raising for the professorship will continue toward an eventual goal of $1 million, he said.

Contributions to Medicine

"Dr. Callaway, known to generations of dermatologists as 'Dr. Cal,' is being recognized for his long service to the university and his continuing contributions to medicine," Anlyan said.

"It gives me great pleasure to know that the high standards he set for himself and for his students will be memorialized in this way."

Callaway is a native of Cooper, Ala., and a 1932 graduate of Duke's School of Medicine. He holds bachelor of science degrees both from Duke and from the University of Alabama.

First Dermatology Chief

After teaching briefly at the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Alabama, he joined the Duke faculty in 1937. In 1946, he was named first chief of dermatology, a position he held until August, 1975, when Dr. Gerald S. Lazarus succeeded him.

A past president of the American Academy of Dermatology, Callaway has written more than 150 scientific articles and has co-authored three textbooks.

In 1973, the American Academy of Dermatology presented its highest honor, the Gold Award, to the physician.

PSYCHIATRIC OFFICER—Dr. H. Keith H. Brodie, professor and chairman of the Department of Psychiatry, has been elected secretary of the American Psychiatric Association, the oldest and largest national society of psychiatrists in the United States. The 24,000-member organization, founded in 1844, meets each year to present and discuss major scientific advances in psychiatry. The association published the American Journal of Psychiatry of which Brodie serves as an associate editor.

Doctor Says Have Another Cup

The current data comes from what epidemiologists — those who analyze the frequency, distribution and control of disease in a population — call an "incidence" study.

Comparing Hospital Records

The researchers examined hospital records, autopsy reports and all other information available on the 339 deaths that occurred since the original interviews. Heyden said they found 40 per cent of the deaths were attributable to heart attacks and strokes.

He and his colleagues then compared this information with the interviews and discovered that persons who drank five or more cups of coffee a day were at no greater risk from heart attacks, strokes or any other causes than those who drank little or none.

Heyden said the study included a majority of the adult population of Evans County. Free physical examinations were given to all participants.

Surgery Workshop Planned Next Week

The first of three annual microvascular surgery workshops will be held here Monday through Friday, June 6-10.

The workshops, sponsored by the division of plastic, maxillofacial and oral surgery, will provide individual training to practicing surgeons and surgical residents who are trying to keep abreast of recent advances in replantation of severed limbs and composite tissue transplantation.

Surgeons from as far away as Canada, Mexico, Venezuela and California are among those who have registered for the five-day courses. The second workshop will be held Oct. 3-7, and the third is scheduled Feb. 13-17, next year.

Video tape presentations and laboratory animal experience will be included in the courses.

Junior Volunteers

Participants in the Hospital Auxiliary's summer Junior Volunteer Program are reminded to meet in the Auxiliary office (room 1001, yellow zone), 8:30 a.m., June 20, to begin the two day orientation.

Call Mary Daugherty, 684-3981, for more information.

WINNING PAPER—Ina Fried, editor of Intercom, and John Becton, public relations assistant, look over the critique of the Intercom issue that won an award for excellence at the 25th International Technical Communications Conference (ITCC) in Chicago. The paper, which also received an award for excellence from the Carolina Chapter of the Society for Technical Communications (STC) at the annual dinner last week, was one of 106 ITCC winners selected from over 1,000 entries at the regional level in the U.S., Canada, South Africa and Israel. Joe Sigler, director of public relations, won an STC award for excellence for the Hospital Patient Brochure. Other STC awards went to David Williamson, medical writer, for three news stories and to Sigler, Fried and Becton for "Thanksgiving," a special philanthropy supplement to Intercom. Earlier in the spring Intercom won the top award in its category in competition sponsored by the southern region of the Group on Public Relations of the Association of American Medical Colleges.
