

THE HAMMER—After seeing Hank Aaron tee off, it was easy to understand how he smacked all those homeruns.

THE QUARTERBACK—Sonny Jurgenson said golf wasn't really his game, but he enjoyed playing for the kids.

NOW YOU SEE IT, NOW...—Mark Brenner taught a few aspiring young magicians how to make a coin disappear.

SPEEDY DELIVERY—Mr. Rogers' envoys, Mr. McFeeley and Purple Panda, delivered and personally autographed photographs.

And for Tar Heel fans, the cast included Choo Choo Justice, Ken Willard and Dean Smith. Smith was all business on the green.

At the 10th tee, Jurgenson yelled across to Billy Kilmer who was at the 18th hole. Their discussion concerned the merits of playing golf after partying all night.

According to the Professor

As everyone prepared for the awards presentations, Professor Irwin Corey took the mike and announced that the trees for the Fourth Annual Children's Classic had been furnished by the Liggett Group. (The co-sponsors of the event had displayed their logo on three trees at the 18th green.)

The professor continued to expound on a variety of unrelated non-sequiturs, to the delight of the crowd, until dragged away by Como and Peter Lind Hayes.

Look-alike

ABC sports announcer Jim McKay, who had rushed away from the Indianapolis 500 to maintain his perfect attendance record at the celebrity golf tournament, restored rationality to the proceedings, while proclaiming himself the winner of the "Sam Katz Look-alike Contest."

He was, of course, referring to Dr. Samuel L. Katz, chairman of the Department of Pediatrics, where the battle against children's diseases was furthered by proceeds from the tourney.

A little earlier, an autograph-collecting youngster had had his father introduce him to Katz, because "he wanted to meet the doctor who's taking care of his little brother."
