

DR. KAREL BOBATH AND BERTHA BOBATH

Specialists Demonstrate Method Of Treating Brain-injured Patient

described the Bobaths as "a team who have been leaders in changing the whole focus of care of brain-injured patients. They are pioneers in the treatment of neurological patients."

Bartlett has been personally involved with the Bobaths since 1957 and has seen their theories of treatment gain acceptance during this time, he said.

He pointed out that the Bobaths have lectured "from one end of the world to the other," and have made yearly lecture tours to the United States for a number of years.

Widely Sought After

"We are really fortunate to have them here," Bartlett said. "They are well sought after, and have to turn down many offers just because of time limitations. To my knowledge, this is the first time they have lectured in the Southeast."

Bartlett has helped coordinate their visits to this country in the past.

The Bobaths operate a treatment center in London and have published numerous articles, both individually and jointly. A limited number of books describing their method of treatment will be available at the seminar.

Included in the program will be lectures on neurophysiology and pathology of postural control, principles of treatment, problems of spasticity, and the neurological and physiological bases for treatment.

The three-day program will utilize closed-circuit television to give the audience a close view of the patient demonstrations.

Fellowship To Support Primary Care Study

Janet Gay Gelein, assistant professor in the School of Nursing, has been selected to receive one of the first 20 fellowships in a new program intended to increase the number of faculty qualified to teach clinical primary care.

With financial support from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Gelein will spend the 1977-78 academic year at the University of Rochester, where she will develop teaching, clinical and research skills in primary care.

Conference Set To Examine Emotional Problems of Elderly

Duke's Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development will sponsor a seminar entitled "Management of Emotional Problems in Late Life" on Saturday, June 25.

The purpose of the seminar, according to Dorothy K. Heyman, executive secretary of the center, is "to inform internists, psychiatrists, family practitioners and other health-care professionals on the best current information related to the physical and mental processes of the elderly."

The conference will include practical considerations which physicians and other therapists encounter in dealing with depression, paranoia and organic brain syndrome, she said.

Family practitioners can earn continuing education credits from the American Academy of Family Practitioners for participating, she added.

Speakers will be:

— Dr. Murray Raskin, director of the Geriatric Research Education and Clinical Center at American Lake Veterans Administration Hospital in Seattle and assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Washington.

— Dr. Dan G. Blazer, assistant professor of psychiatry and associate director for programs at Duke's Center for the Study of Aging.

— Dr. George L. Maddox, professor of sociology and director of the aging center.

The seminar, supported in part by a grant from Sandoz Pharmaceuticals, Inc., will be held in Room 143 of the Edwin L. Jones Building. A $25 registration fee will be charged each participant.

More information is available at 684-3654.

Radiology Appoints Porter Administrator

F.R. (Eric) Porter has been appointed technical administrator in the Diagnostic Division of the Department of Radiology, Dr. Charles E. Putman, professor and chairman of the department, has announced.

"Mr. Porter has worked quite effectively in the capacity as acting technical administrator for the past four months and I feel quite confident that this direction will continue," Putman said.

A graduate of Duke's Radiologic Technologist Program, Porter has worked in the Division of Diagnostic Radiology since 1961. He has been chief technologist for the past nine years.

JANET GAY GELEIN

"By increasing the number of faculty with these qualifications, it is hoped the fellowships program will increase the number of nursing schools offering clinical primary care training to produce what are frequently called nurse practitioners," said Dr. Ingeborg Mauksch, who directs the fellowships program.

Specially Trained Nurses

"These specially trained nurses now represent only a small percentage of nurses, but they have shown that — practicing jointly with physicians — they can assume responsibility for a major share of patients seen in practices offering general medical services," said Mauksch, who is Valere Potter Distinguished Professor of Nursing and a family nurse practitioner at Vanderbilt University.

"Nurse practitioners assess the health status of patients, develop plans for nursing care, diagnose and treat common minor illnesses, manage stable chronic illness, deliver preventive care and counsel patients on psychosocial and health problems," she said.

The fellows were selected from among applicants on the faculty of nursing schools which have National League for Nursing-accredited master's degree programs and the potential to build clinical primary care into the curricula.

Gelein's Background

On the Duke faculty since 1970, Gelein received her bachelor of science in nursing degree from the University of Wisconsin and her master's in nursing from Duke.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation has allocated $3 million to the program for a three-year period. Fellows receive financial support equal to their current faculty salaries and benefits, up to $25,000.

Schools selected as training sites already have established nurse practitioner training programs.

AMERICAN MONEY

"American Money and Banking in Retrospect," an exhibit in honor of the 1977 Alumni Summer Institute, is on display in the gallery of the Perkins Library.

Featured are varieties of 18th and 19th century currency; broadsides of the ante bellum and post bellum periods from North Carolina and other states; and an 1869-71 ledger from the Bank of Savannah open to the account of Confederate General Joseph E. Johnston.

In one case are manuscript workbooks on "ciphering", as arithmetic was called. These belonged to students of 1761, 1801, 1818, and 1830.

The exhibit will be shown through June. It was planned and mounted by William Erwin of the Manuscript Department.
