Six Faculty Members Appointed

The appointments of six medical center faculty members have been announced by University Provost Frederic N. Cleaveland.

Drs. Albert D. Loro Jr. and Robert H. Shipley have been named assistant professors of medical psychology in the Department of Psychiatry. Loro also has been appointed assistant professor of community health sciences.

Dr. David F. Mertens has become associate professor of radiology and assistant professor of pediatrics.

Also receiving assistant professorship appointments are Drs. Steven J. Gross, pediatrics; Emma R. Jakoi, anatomy; and George Michalopoulos, pathology.

A native of Chicago, Loro earned a B.S. degree from Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., in 1971 and a Ph.D. from Washington University, St. Louis, in 1976. He is a staff psychologist for Duke's Dietary Rehabilitation Clinic.

Shipley is from Michigan, and received a B.S. from Michigan State University in 1967. He holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Iowa, granted in 1970 and 1972 respectively.

Mertens is a 1952 graduate of the University of Cincinnati and earned an M.D. there in 1956. The Cincinnati native served in the U.S. Air Force 1959-1971 as chief of pediatrics, March Air Force Base, Riverside, Calif.

Gross received his B.S. and M.D.

degrees from the University of Maryland in 1969 and 1973 respectively. He is a native of Washington, D.C.

A 1968 graduate of Washington State University, Jakoi earned her Ph.D. at Duke in 1973 and has been a staff researcher here since that date. She was born in Canada and became a United States citizen in 1955.

Michalopoulos is from Samos, Greece. He graduated summa cum laude from Athens University Medical School in 1969, and completed his internship and residency at the University of Wisconsin Medical School.

Professional News

In late April, Dr. William G. Anlyan, vice president for health affairs, visited the University of Washington in Seattle for a close look at the WAMI (Washington-Alaska-Montana-Idaho) medical education program. While in the Northwest, he also visited the University of Alaska in Fairbanks and spoke at a Duke alumni luncheon in Anchorage.

Earlier in the month Anlyan was in Cambridge, England, for a meeting of the Macy Foundation Faculty Scholars living in the United Kingdom and Western Europe. Anlyan's association with the Macy Foundation has included service on its Commission to Study the Governance of the Academic Medical Center and the 14-member blue ribbon Commission on Physicians for the Future.

Dr. Stanley H. Appel has joined the Department of Neurology at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston as professor and chairman. He also will direct Baylor's Jerry Lewis Neuromuscular Disease Research Center.

At Duke since 1967, Appel was chief of the neurology division and held a James B. Duke professorship.

Dr. J. Leonard Goldner, professor and chief of the Division of Orthopaedic Surgery, has been named to Honorary Fellowship of the Royal Australian College of Surgeons.

In notifying DR. GOLDNER of his unanimous selection, the president of the college noted that "This is an honour which is restricted to only the most eminent in the profession, and entry into the ranks of Honorary Fellow is determined with the greatest discrimination."

Goldner was present for conferment of the fellowship at the opening ceremony of the college's 50th general scientific meeting May 15 in Melbourne, Australia.

recommendation that was more than statewide."

A graduate of Massachusetts General Hospital School of Nursing, Gardiner received a Bachelor of Science degree from Columbia University.

"What impresses me most is the loyalty of my students," said the retired teacher, who now lives in Alexandria, Va. She corresponds with former students not only from Duke but also from other schools where she taught beginning in 1915: Baylor, Stanford, Kansas University, the University of West Virginia and other diploma schools all over the United States.

She served on active duty as a Red Cross Nurse during World War I. In her leisure time she has enjoyed camping, climbing mountains, rafting down rivers and exploring caves. She has driven across the North American continent 12 times and up and down each side of the U.S. and has visited Europe, New Zealand, Australia and Tasmania.

We Get Letters...

Doctor Anlyan,

I recently came across a letter from you explaining Duke Hospital's involvement with cancer research and asking for contributions. I am familiar with Duke as a patient for a cardiac examination and I have only praise for the polite and efficient service I received.

As much as I would like to make a contribution to Duke, I am unable to at this time because I am only three years old. I asked my Dad to contribute but since he is in college, he too is unable. However, my Dad had promised me that as soon as he graduates and is properly employed, he will make a contribution to Duke Hospital.

Thank you again for informative letter.

Dear Pamela:

It was so good to hear from a friend like you. I enjoyed reading your letter of March 21. It is good to know that you received good service at Duke Hospital.

We appreciate, in particular, your thoughtfulness in asking your father to contribute when he gets through with his college education. Please let him know that his handwriting is very legible and his English is impeccable; it was good of him to offer to write on your behalf.

If on a future occasion you should be visiting the Duke Medical Center, please drop by. We have some fine candy in the office.

With every good wish to you and your parents,

Your Good Friend,
Bill Anlyan
