

FACTS AT YOUR FINGERTIPS — This is a mock-up of the new accordion-fold brochure, "Duke University at a Glance," that is being produced by the Office of Publications. Orders are now being taken for the 3x6½-inch folders, which contain 1,001 pieces of assorted information about the university, finances, faculty, students, schools and departments, etc. The folders must be ordered in lots of 100. The exact cost will be determined by the volume of the printing order, but they will be under 10 cents each. Questions about ordering should be directed to the Office of Publications on Chapel Drive, 684-2490. (Photo by Thad Sparks)

Get 'em while it's hot

None too soon for Durham's version of summertime, Children's Classic T-shirts are available for $3 each or two for $5.

They can be purchased in the Department of Pediatrics office, Room 228, Baker House (brown zone, second floor), or by calling 286-1605. A variety of sizes are available.

The Classic Cookbook, which is selling like and includes a recipe for hotcakes, is still available in the pediatrics office for $5.95, or by mail (Box 2975) for $6.95.

Volunteer companions sought

The Community Guidance Clinic is currently seeking adult volunteers who have at least two hours a week to give to its Volunteer Companion Program. The program is based on a relationship therapy approach to children for whom there exists high risk of learning and behavior problems.

The program is not a traditional big-brother, big-sister program, even though it uses volunteers on a one-to-one basis. It is the goal of the volunteer to provide an opportunity for the child to develop a healthy, caring relationship, not involving material goods.

The children's evaluations, as well as training and supervision of the volunteers are done by clinic staff.

For more information, contact Mary Black at 286-4456.

Good knight, credit

Credit for inventing the credit card probably belongs to medieval German knights. On their travels they made use of a special seal-ring, engraved with their coat-of-arms. Each ring was registered by the jeweler who made it and innkeepers were provided with master lists of these insignia. This made it possible for the knights to travel about with a minimum of cash and valuables.

Duke grads staffing new facility

The Orange Family Medical Center, a community-based medical facility, opened June 19 in Hillsborough. Three Duke medical alumni will staff the center, joining Dr. Robert Murphy, a physician who has been in private practice in Hillsborough for 25 years.

The Orange County Medical Foundation, a group of community residents who were concerned about the need for family physicians in the Hillsborough area, built the 7,000-square-foot center and recruited three family physicians.

Dr. James Mold, a 1974 Duke medical school graduate, joined Murphy in practice June 1 in preparation for the center's opening. Mold received his family medicine training at the University of Rochester.

Dr. Philip Singer, who graduated from the Duke medical school in 1975 and completed the Duke-Watts Family Practice Program this month, will join the Hillsborough practice next week.

Dr. Gregory Solovieff, a 1973 Duke medical alumnus, will join the medical staff of the center in the fall. Solovieff completed the Duke-Watts program in 1976 and has been on the medical staff at University Health Services.

Suzanne Wasiolek, a May graduate of Duke's health administration program, is working full-time for the center as administrative coordinator.

Wasiolek said the medical center is a private, not-for-profit operation and will use income generated from fees for service to pay the mortgage and overhead. Each physician is under individual contract with the foundation.

The center may serve as a training ground for family medicine residents from the Duke-Watts program as early as 1979.

Beds for sale

The university's purchasing department will sell dormitory beds next Friday, July 7, 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. in Hanes House.

The beds have metal frames and wooden head and footboards. Some will have to be disassembled. They will be available for $15 each, cash and carry.
