

GIFT SUGGESTION—This 1979 engagement calendar with 52 full-page black-and-white photographs of Duke people and places is available from the Office of University Publications, Alumni House Annex for $3.25 or $4 by mail. The 6-by-9 inch book is spiral bound in a metallic silver cover. Opposite each photograph is a weekly calendar with ample space for notes.

More about the season

Fa-la-la-la-la

Special programs of music and worship will be held in the medical center and on campus during the holiday season.

This Sunday at 5 p.m., the Northern High School Ensemble will sing in the Duke University Chapel. The performance is sponsored by the Faith and Arts Committee.

There also will be a concert next Friday, Dec. 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the main lobby of the hospital given by the university's String School Youth Orchestra.

There will be no admission charge for either concert.

The annual Christmas Eve service will be held in the campus chapel at 11 p.m., Dec. 24, and Father Ralph Monk, hospital chaplain, will conduct Catholic mass on both Christmas and New Year's Day in the hospital chapel.

Have a happy

In accordance with university policy, the medical center will observe the Christmas holiday on Monday, Dec. 25 and the New Year's Day holiday on Monday, Jan. 1, according to Richard L. Jackson, assistant vice president and director of personnel.

Jackson also announced that designated holidays in the medical center for 1979, in addition to New Year's Day, will be Independence Day, July 4; Labor Day, Sept. 3; Thanksgiving, Nov. 22; Christmas, Dec. 25; and the employee's birthday.

In addition, Jackson said, all active full-time medical center employees on the payroll on the first day of the following months shall earn a discretionary holiday: March, April, May, June, August and October.

Family medicine project funded

(Continued from page 1)

faculty members came into academia to begin the first programs," Bobula said.

As the programs expanded and multiplied across the country, universities had to continue drawing faculty from the ranks of practicing physicians, he said. Few of these individuals had been trained to assume teaching, research and administrative responsibilities, and had to learn instead by trial and error.

"The whole thrust of the grant is to help people to develop the skills needed to be productive faculty members," Bobula said. "And since we expect our staff will do the bulk of the teaching in the four workshops planned each year, we'll spend the next six to 12 months helping them improve their own teaching skills."

Videotapes to be used

Dr. Catharine Munning, who has worked on faculty development and instructional design at the University of Iowa's College of Medicine for the past three years, has been appointed project coordinator.

Among other techniques, she will be videotaping interactions between residents and individual faculty members to show the latter how they can improve their instruction.

Bobula said the Kellogg grant also will support two fellowships that the program awards annually to physicians who are considering careers as teachers of family medicine.

Consultants to smaller programs

In the future, the Duke-Watts staff will act as consultants to smaller family medicine programs that have participated in the Durham workshops.

"We realize that with the tremendous resources of the community and the university behind us and through the generosity of the Kellogg Foundation, we have a very definite responsibility to others," Bobula said.

The late W.K. Kellogg, founder of the ready-to-eat breakfast cereal company that bears his name, established the foundation in 1930 "to help people help themselves," as he expressed it.

From modest beginnings with programs relating to the health and educational needs of children in south-central Michigan, the foundation has grown to be one of the five largest private philanthropic organizations in the United States.

In the past 48 years, it has channeled more than $435 million into efforts to improve health, education and agriculture.

Library guide issued

A "Duke University Library Guide for Faculty and Graduate Students" has been issued by the Perkins Library Reference Department.

The 16-page pamphlet was written by reference librarian Jane Vogel and includes capsule descriptions of some of the special areas and strengths of the university libraries. Particularly useful is the listing of a number of major collections in microform.

The guide is available without cost at the Perkins reference desk, or by calling 684-2373.

"He doesn't want any gifts from the North Pole . . . He just wants a credit card."

Intercom

is published weekly by the Office of Public Relations, Duke University Medical Center, Box 3354, Durham, N.C. 27710.

Joe Sigler
Director

John Becton
Editor

Primary contributors: William Erwin, Comprehensive Cancer Center medical writer; Ina Fried, staff writer; Parker Herring, public relations assistant; Edith Roberts, staff writer; David Williamson, medical writer.

Circulation: Ann Alston