In this masterpiece Anna Karina plays a pretty young Parisienne who leaves her young husband and their baby. She drifts into casual promiscuity and then into the world of prostitution. The film lives her life in the cafes, streets and hotel rooms as, on another level, it explores the inner nature of a human being. The camera captures the reactions of the heroine throughout, slowly, pitilessly until she stands utterly revealed, even to herself, as the object she has become.

Journalistic in form, it tells the story in twelve episodes, each with a title summarizing the events to follow.

Admission is free and the public is invited.
