Yarboro Reigns As Queen

Twenty lovely ladies; students at Southeastern Community College, competed for the position and crown of Southeastern's campus homecoming queen on Monday night, February 14, 1977. The ceremony was held at Hallsboro High School Gym, during half-time of the basketball game against Methodist college. Southeastern's Ram's came on top during the game.

Only five of these beautiful ladies made it to the finals. The decision was a great one made by the students and faculty members. The five finalists were Jeanne Yarboro, Karen Elliott, Margorie Flowers, Cynthia Buie and Vickie Lauden, who were accompanied by their escorts.

Ms. Yarboro who is a member of the SGA and was student judge for the

Ms. Southeastern Pageant, earned and was given the crown and title for Homecoming Queen. She was crowned by Ms. Vanessa Malloy, who earned the title Ms. Southeastern during the pageant held on November 13, 1976.

Ms. Yarboro is a freshman at SCC and is from Wilmington, North Carolina.

Funding Bases For Tax Supported Education In N. C.

Dr. Ronald McCarter of Southeastern, in a recent interview, discussed his views on the funding of Tax Supported Education. Dr. McCarter feels that the North Carolina legislature's way of funding isn't adequate. The legislature bases its way of funding according to the enrollment of the institutions in question.

The legislative judges on the three-party system: public schools, community colleges, and Universities. The public school funding is based on the best six of seven months. The university is judged by enrollment at the end of registration in fall and spring. The two semesters are averaged together. Community colleges are funded by enrollment at the end of each quarter. Enrollment is obviously lower at the end of the quarter than at the beginning. What we have is the public school and university receiving 100 percent of its earned level and the community colleges earning only around 80 percent of its earned level with the enrollment in community college steady growing and the funding going down. Obvious problems are bound to occur. Some community colleges have

SGA Cookout

The Student Government Association at S.C.C. sponsored an annual cookout March 14. Our students were served hot dogs with all the trimmings, potato chips, and cokes. We consumed six-hundred hot dogs, thirty bags of potato chips, and eight-hundred cokes.

Some people who helped make our cookout a success were Sue Hawks, Terry Carr, Fannie Moore, Judy Sarvis, Brenda Ebron, Jeannie Yarboro, Robert Brooks, and the maintenance department, who helped with the equipment. Southeastern has made it a tradition to hold a quarterly cookout, and we hope to continue this.

Student government, along with Bob Priest, would like to thank the students for helping to pick up trash and for conducting themselves in an outstanding manner. Carolyn Shaw
