PLAYING THE GAME

· It has been said that it is not whether you win or lose that counts, but the way you play the game. For one lime prior to the night of February the eleventh, and particularly on that date, the Elon social clubs were busy playing their hands for new members. This article has nothing but praise for the attitude adopted by the majori-ty of the club, during the period of uncertainty; but there as one little incident which deserves special attention.

After the list of eligible, had been issued to the clubs, of the 35-34 core at was discovered that certain names had been omitted met the Davidson Wildeats at Davwhich should have appeared there. When the dean discovered that through covered this error, he wrote the omitted names on four cards and turned them over to a prominent and supposed dependable member of the student body, with the unique that he should deliver one card to the presiof each fraternity. Unfortunately, the "prominent at failed to make the proper delivery, and the eligiheard of the affair, and therefore did not know that these added men were eligible until after bid day had passed. It is unfortunate that a "prominent" member of the student body should pull a trick of this kind, but doubly unfortunate because it comes from a frace, it member, for it reflects, not only upon the individual himself, but also upon his club. The writer believes that there are men in this organization who are too fair-minded to play the game in this way; and it is in the interest of these men that we express our regret. It is too late to make amends now, therefore we are reyealing no names. All we can say is-may it never happen again.
