

Ultra-Modern Vaudeville Revue
Coming To Carolina Stage Tuesday

KAYNE and FOSTER, the famous dancing team that just closed a successful engagement at the Village Barn in New York City, will appear in person on the stage of the Carolina theatre, Burlington, next Tuesday, along with the Ultra-modern Vaudeville Revue, FOLIES DE-PAREE, featuring five great acts. You'll see and enjoy such notables as JEAN EDERLE, one of Broadway's cleverest Comediennes and Mistress of Ceremonies, recently featured at the New York Latin Quarters.

THE GRAYSONS, America's leading exponents of the Adagio, just completed five weeks at the Roxy Theatre, New York. CHRISTIANA, in her original jungle dances, comes direct from the Club Cairo, Washington, D. C. Last but not least, the two world-famous black-face comedians, Emmett Miller and McBee, plus the PARISIAN RHYTHM BAND. FOLLIES DE PAREE will appear on the Carolina stage for four performances only, at 2:15, 4:15, 7:15 and 9:15 o'clock. The usual low stage-show prices will prevail.

PROF. EARL DANIELEY
Danieley on the election ruling follows:

"My criticism is two-fold: (1) Chairman Vernon was unfair to me and to the citizens of the county by not informing us of this change in procedure as early as possible. In fact, he didn't tell me until I called on him. (2) The people of any county should have the right to select their own Board of Education. The office is a minor one, but it is of tremendous importance. It is inconceivable that the members of the State Legislature will study qualifications other than political affiliation. We should rise up and demand a change in the law before the next election."

By FRANCES NEWTON
Joseph J. Gustoff,
Born September 13, 1948.
Died November 5, 1948

On one of the first days of school Joe's name appeared on Dr. Sloan's roll, but the next time the class met and Gustoff's name was called, a voice from the back of the room drawled, "Oh, 'Doc,' Joe got his toe broken in football practice the other afternoon."

"I'm very sorry to hear about it," Dr. Sloan said. "Hope he will soon be back with us."

While Gustoff was out with his broken toe, Dr. Sloan seated the class alphabetically and left a place for Joe.

Then at a later class meeting, the bad news fell.

"Say, 'Doc,'" a student said, "you know—Gustoff got hurt pretty bad in the game the other night. He's been in bed for a couple of days now."

"I certainly am sorry to hear that but maybe he'll be back with us in a few days—let's hope so anyway."

Then came the day for the first big test—the one on Genesis. No one saw Joe come in or go out, but he was there apparently. When Dr. Sloan returned the papers he asked, "Will anyone see Gustoff? He might like to know that he made 85 on the quiz."

Whenever homework papers were handed back, Joe's all had good grades. He never came to class but he always managed to send his papers by someone.

It has been but about a week ago that a member of the class came dashing in all excited, exclaiming, "Gustoff's in the hospital. He got hurt again this Saturday night in the game and I don't think he'll pull through this time. It sure is bad."

Dr. Sloan, trying to make the boy feel better about poor Joe, remarked, "I really am sorry to hear about Gustoff, but remember, where there's life there's hope."

It's really too bad about Joseph J. Gustoff, but since football and religion have already put him out of commission, it might really be better for all concerned to acknowledge his untimely death.

EPITAPH

I came without my own consent
Lived a little while, much discontent
At human errors grieving,
But now the grass does me inclose
The superstitious will suppose
I'm doomed to hell's damnation.
'Tis easy men should be deceived
When anything by them believ'd
Without a demonstration.

Joe, a purely fictitious character, was created solely for the amusement of Dr. Sloan's class, and his passing is lamented by all those who like a good joke.
