Plans Set For Gala Elon Homecoming Observance

Elon Players Plan Show In November

By CAROL TRAGESER

The Elon Players will open their 1963-64 drama season in November with the production of Arthur Miller's, "Death of a Salesman". a twentieth-century tragedy about the downfall of Willy Low man an American salesman.

Prof Sandy Moffett, head of the college drama department and director of the play, will supervise try-outs for the cast of thirteen characters next Monday, October 21st. at 2 o'clock, and 7 o'clock and next Tuesday, October 22nd at 2 o'clock in Mooney Theater.

In announcing tryouts for the play. Professor Moffett said he feels "Salesman" is a "challenge" as it involves serious drama and difficult acting, and he expressed a desire that interested students and faculty attend the try outs, which are open to the public

With the scheduled performance as a beginning, the drama group plans to participate in activities which will foster participation and interest in the campus theater. Tentatively planned for the year are experimental workshops, production of aa musical in the spring and presentation of a one-act play at the Carolina Drama Festival which is held annually in Chapel

Also, the Players hope to participate in a reciprocal drama program involving the exchange of stage productions among colleges in the North Carolina Conference tion faculty, and Larry Turnage, have been guests of the Virginia In this festival the players would be in competition with similar groups from other colleges.

In viewing the year, Professor Moffett said that he will work with the Elon Players in producing

From Foundation

Indicative of the growing and widespread interest of big business in the privately-endowed and church-related colleges, Elon College last week was the recipient of a check for $300 from the John Deere Foundation, which is sponsored by the Pohn Deere Company of Moline, III., manfacturers of tractors and farm

The presentation of the check was made on the Elon campus by C. V. Boyd, division sales manager for the John Deere Company in its Atlanta brauch office. In presenting the gift, Mr. Boyd stated that his company and the John Deere Foundation had long aided private colleges in the Middle West and is now expanding its philanthropy into other sections of the
