

REID THIS! Cage Squad In Tourney Next Week

With the Maroon & Gold's printing a football picture backward and putting the bottom line on top in a page one headline, I suspect many of you went around campus with a ho-ho and it isn't even Christmas.

Po' old Don Brown and Paul Bleiberg. Here they work off goodly portions of their rumpusses only to look like asses with the first issue.

If it's any salve to wherever the editors' pains are located, newspapers with more circulation than the M&G flub the dub.

The opposition paper in my town, for example, enjoys a distinct advantage over the M&G: It can goof up every day while the M&G only has a chance weekly.

I keep a scrapbook of the better boo-boo's of our opposition. If Messrs. Brown and Bleiberg read this far, they may take heart. They can hardly match these, even if they try:

"The auto was reported stolen by Newport News Police."

"A man, unidentified except for his name, was killed at the Yorktown bridge."

"The fisherman is survived by his material grandmother."

"Nachman's Department Store will be open tonight until 9 a.m."

"A local pigeon owned by James A. Daniels Jr. became the third bird to fly 600 miles in one day during a race. The pigeon flew at an average of 1,137 miles per minute."

"The oil cruse pictured is of the same type mentioned in Matthew 25 as carried by the five wise Virginians."

"The beauty contest is shaping up."

"The body was found in the river going to Danville."

"The Fort Monroe soldier told police he swerved on Fulton St. to avoid striking a dog but struck a fire hydrant instead."

"Three girls took top honors at a stock show."

"He fell over a bucket and split a kidney."

"Lieutenant Anderson was found guilty and dismissed."

"Long range weather forecast: Fair and mile."

"Judge Smith was informed that the buildings were equipped without toilets."

And our own newspaper's mistakes?

Man, I don't keep book on that.

THEY MARCH PERT AND PRETTY WITH ELON BAND

Highstepping in pert and pretty style in front of the Elon College Marching Band throughout this football season have been the five majorettes pictured above, and the same quintet will be adding greatly to the pleasure of Elon's grid fans as the Christians tangle with Frederick at Burlington Stadium tomorrow night. The lass out front is Chief Majorette Eveline Garrison of Burlington. Others left to right are Adrienne Moen, of Balmar-Wall, N.J.; Debby Draughn, of Sanford; Kay Savage, of Whaleyville, Va.; and Mary Lee Larue, of Sanford. Misses Garrison and Savage also served as majorettes last season, but the others are newcomers on the musical scene this fall.

ARTS AND FLOWERS

(A Review)

(Continued from page 2) together. The "Valse American" (as it was spelled on the program) also lacked form and continuity, but it was an admirable attempt to straddle the line dividing "serious" and "popular" music. The program closed with Sousa's "Sempre Fidelis" as Christian again played the melody on a set of drums.

The Elon College Community Orchestra did a fine job with this complex music, although the string section still leaves much to be desired. Concerning Bobby Christian, if I question his abilities as a composer, I have no doubt that he is a great percussionist and teacher. Early in the program he remarked that a percussionist is a musician, and that he intended to prove it. It may be argued that Bartok settled the matter thirty years ago with his music, but Christian's point is yet valid. And he obviously enjoys what he is doing.
