RUMOR HUMOR

Since we ruled out columns for the Maroon and Gold, I thought I would write a column.

Adviser Luther Byrd will howl, I know, but what the devil-- he isn't God.

Actually, he and I are in agreement: A gossip column is a little below our standing. Still, I cannot argue that this one-shot foolishness will be read more avidly than anything else in this issue. Of course, I do hold a certain advantage -- this being the only column.

Okay. Read sharply:

I'm curious as to what transpired after the Appalachian football game with Buzz Ledford and Jimmy Daniels? I suspect Daniels was the only winner there. Ledford was in as bad a shape as our smashed team.

A Civil War may have developed between Andy Morris and Eleanor Zez-zo.

Gordy Payne and Kenny Shaw are way ahead of me. In my time, we used to throw custard pies. Payne and Shaw are heaving cake.

This is October. Already, the goodly Sigma Phi Beta lads have celebrated the Fourth of July.

Lord Red, known to close friends as Sandy Carrington, was another loser at the Appalachian bash: no date.

Marty Bonnett, defensive football star from Warwick, Va., runs a few offense plays toward Sandra Dofflemyer. Bill Miele, umpiring from sidelines, may be figuring on assessing major penalty for off-sides.

John White and Janet Thornhill most puzzling. They request bus driver to turn off heat while demanding blanket.

So, old H. just set the Maroon and Gold and journalism back twenty-two years, but permit me to brag.

For an old guy who has been away from campus those twenty-two years, I think I did pretty good digging up gossip. Here Luther Byrd has been living at Elon for the past 19 years and I bet there are some things in this column that might be news to him.

JOHN ADAMS

"Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America, and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States." Letter to Mrs. Adams (July 3, 1776)

Appeal Made For Letters

It seems quite evident that some of these Elon freshmen do not write home as often as their parents would wish them to do, for last week the Maroon and Gold received by mail the following appeal from a parent in Vienna, Va. The appeal was intended for insertion as a personal advertisement, but the Maroon and Gold does not use ads, so it is used as a news item.

The appeal read as follows: "Middle-aged, greying and somewhat successful executive would like to correspond with young female student at Elon College, preferably with his daughter." Name and address is withheld, but the young female student may be able to identify the sender by the home town address of Vienna, Va. An additional clue lies in the fact that it came from Shenandoah Street.

Name Leaders For Elon E-4 Funds Drive

The appointment of eleven team captains to lead the campaign for the Major Gifts Division of Elon's E-4 Development Campaign has just been announced by Dr. J. E. Danieleley, Elon's president, who expressed pleasure that the citizens of the Burlington area have been so cooperative in the campaign to raise funds for the future of Elon College.

The Major Gifts Division of the E-4 Campaign was launched this week under the direction of William L. Fayle, chairman, and R. Cruse Lewis, associate chairman, both of whom are from Burlington and both associated with the Burlington Industries organization.

The eleven team captains, working under the leadership of Fayle and Lewis, include William S. Chandler, Kenneth S. Faucette, Buddy Holt, L. W. Johnson, Ben E. Jordan, Jr., W.E. Love, Jr., Joe G. Mann, Thomas D. McGowen, Arnold L. Sanders, Dr. Ludwig Scott and Dr. Carl Sellars.

Each of these captains was to select three team members, and he was then to join with them in making approximately 150 contacts in the effort to raise funds for the college.

The E-4 Campaign now has cash and pledges totalling about $1,300,000

MAJORETTES ADD GREATLY TO ELON BAND PROGRAMS

The five majorettes, who step high and pretty in front of the Elon College marching band at all its performances, add greatly to the band programs. The majorettes, pictured left to right above, are Adrienne Moen, of Belmar-Wall, N.J.; Karen Flynn, of Elon College; Kay Savage, of Whaleyville, Va. (Chief Major-ette); Cleo Perdue, of Roanoke, Va.; and Janet Thornhill, of Chesapeake, Va., who was formerly the chief majorette at Frederick College.

Players Win High Praise From Critic

have been at times, Miss Condon made a strong Antigone.

As Creon, Dale Kaufmann's delicate underplaying resulted in some of the most ringing speeches in the entire play. Even his relaxed way of smoking a cigarette contributed to the effect.

Mary Lee, in the role of Ismene, the sister of Antigone, delivered her lines well. Her impassioned reply when Antigone asked her to help bury their dead brother was beautifully handled.

James Gillespie, the narrator, had good dramatic movement, but his diction could have stood some improvement.

Neil Henning, one of the guards, added a touch of humor with his staccato Jack Webb-like manner of speaking.

Nancy Boone was persuasive as Antigone's elderly nurse.

Director Moffett put together an interesting evening of theater that had a great deal to say about the burning issues of our time.

toward the final goal of $3,000,000, which is a preliminary goal to the eventual final goal of $5,000,000 in the long range campaign. The E-4 title refers to the idea that "Elon Expands Its Educational Excellence."

"Nothing gets a group of women off the subject faster than her arrival."

Always pass the car ahead on curves or on hills. It gives the fellow meeting you such a thrill.

Elon Plays At WCU

Western Carolina an astonishing 34 to 20 victory over the powerful Emory and Henry Wasps, who were ranked eleventh in the national NAIA standings. It was WCU's third straight win after two early-season losses to Carson-

Newman and Appalachian.

All of this means that the Elon grid squad will face one of its toughest tests of the 1968 campaign when they move into the Catamount stadium at Cullowhee tomorrow night for the annual clash between two old rivals.
