THESE WERE AMONG FIRST STUDENTS SERVED IN CAFETERIA

NIGHT ARTISTS

Just beyond O'Kelly monument that night, I could have sworn Isaw leprechauns.

There were these wee folk scampering to and fro, waving paint brush-es and assembling a mon-sterous whimmydiddle.

Still, leprechauns real-ly should be out of bounds in Alamance County and, besides, the only pictures of the Irish mini-people I've seen show 'em with beards and such.

These folk before me now certainly lacked beards. They, in fact, dis-played traces of being very feminine, indeed. "We want to finish our homecoming display be-fore the deadline," one of the nocturnal creatures told me, splashing a brush of black paint on what I thought was a giant colthought was a giant col-oring book. I also obser-ved the tiny person was a girl, very much so, one Sandra Isley of Burling-ton, she of the BOB per-suasion. "We've been painting since 7:30 this painting since 7:30 this morning."

It was about 9 at the time and a very chilly 9 o'clock, I might add.

The other never-saydie painters, Ann Lentz and Penny Gilliam of Burlington and Cathy Mangum of Burlington, said they'd been putting together what they'd hoped would be the best homecoming decorabest homecoming decora-tion of all. "We had a little help," one of the young ladies told me. I forget just which one. It was awfully dark . "You see, these pages are really made out of throwaway hores that of throwaway boxes that matteresses are packed in." "I see," I said, real-izing how foolish that 121ng now toonsh that sounded as it was dark, dark, dark. "What hap-pens if it rains?" "Oh, we have some plastic sheeting we can put over it," said one young lady, swabbing a red touch to a drawing of Alamance Hall of Alamance Hall.

Idealist that I am, I liked to think the girls were giving the display their all for the benefit of us visiting alumni. Closer to reality, I guess, is the BOB crowd mainly wanted to win a prize. In any event, I can safely report they did go out of their way. "Suppose you don't win in the judging?

"You cry." "Or," added an opti-mistic lady leprechaun, thinking big, "You wait'll pert year." next year.

Among the early arrivals and among the first students to be served in the new cafeteria in the beau-tiful William A. Harper Center on Elon's North Campus were the three girls shown above, who were snapped by the photographer on Monday morning, November 25th, when the new eating facility began serving food. The girls pictured, left to right, are Dawn Chrisman, of Portsmouth, Va.; Wendy Brown, of Clifton, Va.; and Linda Dukovitch, of Virginia Beach, Va.

New Dining Hall Means Much To College

By BILL WALKER One of the most needed and also one of the most beautiful additons to the Elon College physical plant came with the opening of the new dining hall in the William A. Harper Center, which is an integral part of the magnificent new living-dining complex on Elon's new North Campus.

The new dining hall, operating upon a cafeteria basis, was opened and

WOFFORD GAME

(Continued from Page 3) Captain Bill Bowes topped the Christian scoring with seven field buckets and five of six free throws for 19 points; but he was pushed closely by Tommy Cole, clever freshman guard, who racked seven field baskets and hit four charity tosses for 18 points.

Other Christians in double digits on the score sheet were Richard Mc-George, who played a strong game off the boards and racked up 15 counters for the night, and Tom McGee, who came on in a relief role to count 11 points in the second half.

Jim Littlefield paced the visiting Wofford Ter-riers with 16 points, with Jimmy Laughridge get-ting 11 and Barry Lentz 10 points for Coach Gene Alexander's outfit. THE LINE-UPS served its first meal to the college students at the breakfast hour on Monday morning, November 25th, and its opening was hail-ed with pleasure by all concerned.

The cafeteria is in the most modern style, with richly carpeted floors, attractive tables and chairs for the use of the diners and with the very latest in food-serving equipment.

There are special warming lamps to keep the food warm as it is being served to the students and an ice chest which keeps the salads much fresher as they are being served. By comparison with the McEwen Dining Hall, itself built just ten years ago, the new cafeteria is like a dining room in the most modern hotel.

McGEORGE

In addition to Richard McGeorge at end, the other Christians who won All - Conference rating were Burgin Beale, sensational senior tailback; Lloyd Kanipe, senior star at the linebacking position; Emery Moore, junior fullback, who led the Elon gridders in rushing for a second straight season; and Pete McDaniel, sophomore tackle, wh stood out on defense. Both McGeorge and Kanipe were unanimous choices by the vote of the coaches in the Conference.

With Elon and Lenoir Rhyne each winning five spots on the 22-man squad, other teams which placed men on the All-Conference were Presbyterian and Western Carolina with three spots each, trailed by Catawba, Newberry and Guilford with two players so honored.

A special factor in the term of service to the students is the fact that the new dining facility is lo-cated in the same build-ing with the new Staley Hall and Moffett Hall, the two new dorms which were opened for use this fall, and students residing in those two living facilities will be able to get their meals without having to go outside in rough weather.

Of special interest in the modern equipment of the new dining hall is the moving belt which returns the trays and dishes to the washing room.
