MORE THAN

Football season, if we are to believe what television, newspapers and sporting schedules tell us, is over for a time.

Yet, if you look at it in proper perspective, football can be a year-round thing. The spunk some guys show ten Saturdays a year ought not to be dismissed just because we're slam in the middle of basketball.

Now, there's one Fighting Christian who showed a flair for combat this past year --- one Ron O'Brien, the Fayetteville Irishman, who switched to our place after a brilliant junior college career down in Georgia.

Consider his situation:

The first time he touched the ball for Elon was on a punt return against Concord. He skidded for 77 yards for a touchdown. Pretty fair for a start.

In the Guilford game, the stocky Irishman ran another punt 66 yards, setting up an Elon score.

O'Brien, despite irregular appearances in the Christian starting line-up, fritter little time when he did get into Elon's games. He only broke four punt return records during the season.

Although he was assigned to blocking back, he played a bit of tail-back when super-ultra-hyper-star Burgin Beale was hurt. I mean how does O'Brien follow such an act as Beale's.

And he worked at wing-back, as well.

Coach Red Wilson had coached O'Brien in high school days for both at Fayetteville, so naturally he thinks well of his scrapping qualities. His teammates like him too. I'll let you in on what one teammate thought: "I like O'Brien's blocking. He knows just one speed--faster."

So Ron O'Brien is heaven-sent, although his girl friend may not think so.

Moreover, he did have a few devilish moments in the Appalachian maxi-tragedy. He fumbled a couple that proved particularly damaging. One might even say that such antics looked like hades.

Now check me on this: What O'Brien learned -- and also taught our more publicized athletes during the past football season-- lasts 365 days a year. It cannot be gained from any textbook in our new library or any course offered in our academic catalogue.

Only book I know of even mentioning O'Brien's honor grade lesson is Mr. Webster's. I try looking under: Courage.
