

CLOSE UP

On student life programs, "We're working on that now. I hope we'll soon have a closer rapport between faculty, administration and students, concerning student life. Possibly we can have weekly or bimonthly meetings, how often necessary, in order to find out what the student's perceive to be their problems, their lost opportunities, and what the others perceive in these matters. Once we can identify the problems, we'll set up little task forces to study these problems and the possible alternatives to them. Then we can take the one that seems to do the best for us in terms of the goals of the institution. I take the position that a college experience should be one of the happiest in ones life . . . if that environment isn't making the student body and faculty happy in working out their own lives and careers then we really need to look around and find out whats bugging them."

DIMENSIONS: What is your position on open visitation and drinking on campus?

DR. MONCURE: "I'm not saying yes or no, I'm saying what I do think is that if we have study committees consisting of students and the different basic constituencies of the college, and a proposal is made to change certain regulations pertaining to drinking or dorm visitation, or some other facet of college life, it seems to me that group ought to study that carefully and then submit a recommendation. This can again be scrutinized and if you can get through that process all the way up then there could be a change. I wouldn't want to come down here and be the Vice President of Student Affairs with a closed mind, on the other hand I don't want to come with an open mind, I want to come with a critical mind, and that's what education is all about; development of critical factors."

DIMENSIONS: How do you find North Carolina living as compared to Virginia living?

DR. MONCURE: "More difficult right now because my family is still in Richmond. I am a guest in the president's home, and have been for this month. He has been wonderful to me and he has a priceless family. It's really hard to say anything in that regard because I've lived all my life in Richmond so I know all the resources of Richmond. . . I like North Carolina, the people here are very friendly, I like the students . . . they are terrific, I like them very much and am looking forward to working mmore with them."

or Chris, and they (the viewers) try to determine the means/methods by which the fictional character will resolve his/her dilemma. These people are able to recount, at any given time, the entire story line of five or six of these stories with an accuracy which would put a computer to shame. How often have teachers longed for this proficiency in their classes?

But beware, for those who try to interrupt this sacred ritual to ask some unimportant question such as, what happened in class today?, shall be confronted with guttural noises and death-dealing glances. It is the unpardonable sin to interrupt these shows — the commercials have already claimed that area. So remember folks, the next time you pass by a room and bodies are piled on top of each other, don't be alarmed — It is soap-opera time!

against Guilford. Because of snow, a match scheduled on the 25th against Catawba was cancelled. On the 28th the ladies took off for Pfeiffer College and came back with their first win of the year by a score of 6-3.

The members of this years team are Teddy Ireland, Janie McGann, Susie Mills, Laurie Newman, Lana Peavy, Karen Pearson, and Jan Windhorst.

May you be reminded, that all home matches are played on the campus tennis courts (of course) and they all start at 2:00 p.m. unless otherwise specified.

Golf Team Right On Par

When it's not raining or snowing the golf team is playing. They have been playing well to say the least. March 18th they downed a High Point Club by a score of 19-5. During the Camp Lejeune Tournament the Elon club finished fifth with a final score of 886. On the 27th Guilford posted very little competition for the Elon team which dealt Guilford a very convincing 24-0 loss.

Chuck Scott is the low man of the young Elon team. At High Point he scored a 73, at Atlantic Christian a 72, and a 71 at Lynchburg.

Because of the lousy weather a couple matches have been rescheduled: April 16 Elon will host UNC-G at 1:00 p.m. and May 6 Elon will host Campbell at 1:30 p.m.

The North Carolina Tournament will be held April 8th and 9th. April 16th Elon will play UNC-G at Elon and the next day they will play an

This Week In The Student Senate

On the twenty-eighth of March, the Elon College Student Senate met in the senate chambers in the William S. Long Student Center to discuss four new regulations.

The regulations were as follows:

I. A resolution to increase SGA dues and establish a collection of class dues.

Whereas: The SGA dues are insufficient to meet the needs of the student body;

Whereas: There is no substantial amount of money at the beginning of the year for each class;

Whereas: It is difficult to collect money for class functions;

Be it hereby enacted that: Article I: SGA dues be increased to $15.00 per semester,

Article II: 50¢ of the total $15.00 of SGA dues shall be appropriated to the official class which the student is a member at the time of enrollment.

This resolution was passed.

II. A resolution to provide for unlimited cuts for upperclassmen

Whereas: The current system is on a high school level and college students should be mature enough to take it upon themselves to attend class.

Article I: Any upperclassmen with a 2.0 or better average is entitled to unlimited cuts.

This resolution was put into the Judicial Committee for review.

III. A resolution to abolish the strict campus penalty.

Whereas: The Strict campus penalty is a cruel and unusual form of punishment,

Be it hereby enacted that: Article I: The strict campus penalty be abolished,

Article II: In its place a penalty of campus of work penalty both shall be administered.

This resolution was put into the Judicial Committee for review.

IV: A resolution to provide for open Honor Court.

Whereas: The students do not know how the Honor Court works,

Be it hereby enacted that:

Honor Court Reviewed

A special sub-committee consisting of concerned student Senators, the Attorney-Generals office and headed up by S.G.A. Vice-President Mark Mancini, have reviewed the Honor Court system and have revised it so it will function more properly.

Expressing concern over recent Honor Court happenings, the special committee drew up new plans for the court to follow which hopefully will provide a smoother acting Honor Court. Plans for twice a month court sessions on the respective Tuesdays will hopefully promote a more systematic approach, rather than the erratic scheduling as before. The appointed student judges were interviewed as to their capabilities and standards as judges, and two new alternate justices were selected after interviews and discussion by the committee.

The Attorney-Generals office was reviewed also, and agents appointed to aid Attorney-General Ray Beck.

This is just one of the many revisals done by the Senate this year and it is the hope of this committee that it will provide a better Honor Court for the protection of the students.
