Drama Workshop for children is being sponsored by the Student Union Board

by Kemp Liles

Starting Oct. 19 and continuing through Dec. 14, a workshop on children's drama will be sponsored by the Student Union Board. The workshop will be directed by Carol Hawthorne, a 1964 graduate of Elon College who works part time for the Arts Association of Alamance County and the North Carolina Council for the Arts. The workshop will be held at the Back Door from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday nights.

Ms. Hawthorne, who is originally from Annapolis, Md., majored in English at Elon and received a master's in recreation at UNC-CH. She has studied children's drama in England and also at the University of Minnesota and has started several creative workshops in North Carolina and Maryland. Ms. Hawthorne's current workshop will focus on creative dramatics and using drama as a teaching method She noted that the workshop would be of particular interest and use to education majors.

Included in the workshop sessions will be the opportunity to work on the play 'Too Many Corners" by Lynda Miller from the University of Minnesota. Beginning Dec. 10, at the Back Door, "Too Many Corners" will be under a grant from the North Carolina Council of the Arts and co-sponsored by the Student Union Board. The play, a musical fantasy, will be an intimate participation theater production with a cast of six. The cast will range from 13 to 19 years of age. Anybody wanting to work on the play should contact Ms. Hawthorne or attend the workshop. There are openings in any field of the production and there is a special need for a musical director.

Revamped Garrison's is now Brown and Co. on Elon College

New establishment in Elon is now open for students

by Doug Durante

Remember the drab, plain looking streets of Elon College? Well, unless this is your first year at "Big E," you surely must have noticed the changes that have taken place. The big business boom is here. Within the past year we have seen a Hardee's, a clothing store, and a funny looking blue building emerge as successful business ventures. Not to be outdone, Elon grad Joel Brown is finally doing what he wants: establishing a quality restaurant in the town of Elon College.

Located in the former Garrison's, Brown and Co. will offer a varied menu, including subs, kosher sandwiches, and pizza. Joel's head cook is a 28-year veteran of kitchens of the Holiday Inn chain, and he feels this will enable them to present quality food.

"We want to give a Southern bar atmosphere," said Joel, "a place where you can get something to eat any time during the day and drop in and have a beer later in the evening."

Joel stresses, however, that it is not a beer joint. There is a chance of happy hours and specials but nothing definite at this point. Brown & Company opened last week and hope to enjoy a successful stay in Elon.

Enter poems, essays, or stories for prize money

That poem, short story or essay which earned you an A in Freshman English may be worth $10 to $100 in International Publications' creative writing contests, open to all college students.

Each poem submitted must be original and unpublished, titled, typed double-spaced on one side of the page with your name, address and college in the upper left corner. You may enter up to five poems no longer than 14 lines each, and small black-and-white illustrations are welcome.

Send your entries by Oct. 25, along with $1 registration fee for the first and 50 cents for each additional poem, to: International Publications, 4747 Fountain Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90029. I.P. will notify all prize winners immediately after the deadline and will print all accepted poems in an anthology, American Collegiate Poets.

Students learn politics on job

by Linda Shoffner

PS 420 has only eight scheduled class meetings during the semester, is offered only in election years, and has no exams. The college bulletin calls it a 'Workshop in Politics.'

Dr. Frederic T. Watts, Jr., instructor, says, "Students learn by doing, as well as by reading. This course is intended to provide a learning experience in politics by participation in an election campaign. The purpose is to learn how a specific campaign is planned, managed, and carried out.'

Each participating student arranges to work eight hours per week for the candidate of his choice in a national, state or local campaign. The campaign manager evaluates the student's work, which is the most important element in the course.

After the November election, the student will write a case study evaluating the total campaign and comparing various aspects of it with textbook studies.

The course is not directed at how campaigns "should" be conducted, but how they are conducted, Dr. Watts emphasized.

educated, whole, human being above all else.

In November Dr. Chase will be ordained as a minister in the Presbyterian Church, United States, which is the southern branch of the Presbyterian Church. That's a relatively large step for a person who was a ninth grade mathematics teacher not so long ago. Dr. Chase suspects that she would still be teaching mathematics had not a very important event in her life interrupted her teaching back in 1961. In that year, she became a Christian. "I wanted to know all I could about it, and to do that I had to go back to school," she says.

In addition to working on her M.A. and Ph.D. between 1962 and 1973, Dr. Chase led a full life. She served in campus ministry for five years at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va. While at Duke she was a member of the Duke Chapel Choir, which she termed "an experience and a half." She was a dorm house counselor while at Duke and also worked in administration at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

Here at Elon, Dr. Chase is a freshman adviser and will serve on the Communications Media Board. In her duties as an adviser, she expects "to learn as much, if not more, from students as they learn from

During her free time, Dr. Chase is involved in varied interests. She enjoys reading, listening to classical music, wood carving, and photography among other things. She even finds time to make her own clothes. Dr. Chase also enjoys the out-of-doors and is concerned with the condition of our environment. These and other qualities that Dr. Chase possesses should add a new and exciting dimension to the study of religion here at Elon.

CLASS PICTURES will be made Oct. 14, 15 & 16 in West dorm parlor during the following times: Thurs.: 9 a.m.-8 p.m., Fri.: 9 a.m.-8 p.m., and Sat.: 8 a.m.-noon. Be sure to have YOUR picture made!
