THIS WEEK IN HISTORY - SMOKING POLICY CHANGES

ALEX TOMA | ASSISTANT DESIGN CHIEF

In the Fall of 2011, Elon University changed its smoking policy to prohibit smoking within 30 feet of the perimeter of university buildings.

Prior university policy prohibited smoking within university buildings and within 30 feet of building entrances. By January 2012, students and faculty were frustrated by the lack of compliance to the new policy and its lack of enforcement.

The motivation for the policy amendment was, according to Smith Jackson, former Vice President and Dean of Student Life and current associate professor, increasing concern for the health of others being subjugated to second-hand smoke. Signs were posted around campus in areas where smoking was deemed permissible, but in January, smokers were frustrated by the lack of permanent installations and said this contributed to non-compliance.

"Part of the problem is that receptacles can be difficult to find, and to my knowledge, no shelter is available for smoking away from campus buildings," said L.D. Russell, a lecturer in religious studies.

Jordan Perry, former coordinator for student development on substance education said permanent accommodations were not installed to allow for the possibility of a smoking ban and due to potentially high costs.

NO SMOKING

Seven years ago, university policies prohibited smoking within 30 feet of buildings. In spite of conversations regarding even stricter limitations, no such policies have been passed.

NEWS BRIEFS

Elon Commemorative remembers Martin Luther King Jr.

A number of events were held this month to honor the work of Martin Luther King Jr.

Bestselling author and entrepreneur and motivational speaker Moore will be delivering a lecture at 6 p.m. Jan. 11 at the McCrary Theatre and special service at 10:50 a.m. on Jan. 12 at the Baptist Church.

These events are part of a series of events leading up to Monday, Jan. 15, when the Elon School of Business will host a community meeting at the Greensboro where celebrating Martin Luther King Jr. with a day of service.

For more information on these and other events, visit the calendar on E-Net.

Love School Business joins national partnership

Elon University's Spencer Love School of Business has joined the International Association of Business Schools (IABS) consortium of 12 leading business schools in the U.S., Europe, Asia, and Latin America, according to a press release.

These schools include the U.K., Germany, Mexico, and the U.S.

Students of IPBS schools participate in a special program of grants dual degree programs to the IPBS website. The program includes study in two countries, a more cross-cultural fluency, and a more aptitude.

North Carolina State University's Poole College of Management is a partner of the IPBS program. Other schools involved in the program include the University of San Francisco.

Elon Center for the Arts hosts 'Our Colorful Future'

Throughout the month of January, Elon University's Center for the Arts will be hosting the photo exhibition "Our Colorful Future" by Alejandra Huitrón and Topolino Films.

Huitrón and Ancira are young children's lives and children in conflict zones, etc.

According to The Times New York project, which has already been presented by Latinos Unidos la Esperanza (United Latin American Hope) (LUPE).

"We work with LUPE on the concept of art to let us know that we are all together," said to The Times New York. "It doesn't matter Mexican, if you are American." "The concept is basic: children that you see never know what is going to happen tomorrow. Maybe one day you can be your doctor or the police that help you, or the fireman that save your life."
