ON GRADUATING IN 1946

America's first peace-time graduating classes since 1941 will go forth into a world that is essentially out of joint, a world literally beset with problems, the magnitude of which is beyond the comprehension of our keenest minds. In a word, it is a world of increasing complexity and uncertainty. Famine, demoralization, and want for the barest necessities of life follow in the wake of war devastated countries of the world. At home the very objectives for which many of our fighting men gave their lives, homes, employment and reasonable security—have too often not been forthcoming.

Intense has been the friction between capital and labor and the age-old clash between classes, races, sections and religions continues as the world moves in constant fear of the destructive possibilities of atomic energy.

The total situation offers a challenge to the college graduate of 1946, especially those who will follow the teaching profession. What will he do about it? What can he do? Will he have to do anything? Well, no, he won't have to do anything? He will not have to vote; he will not have to support community welfare; he will not have to think of the public good. The inventor does not have to deprive himself and be sneered at while he plods on. The soldier does not have to choose a hazardous task. The reformer does not have to face uphill work to make this a better world, unless he wants to.

But the great victories, the personal attainment and the struggle for progress have all been due to the dauntless courage and heroic effort of men and women who did not have to do what they did so brilliantly. The year 1946 and those that will follow call for the best that any college graduate ever had. No, we do not have to give our best, but we will.

THE VETS BIN

William Wilson, Thomas Williams, James Balwin and Jesse Roberts were the last members of that bunch of Enlisted Reserve Corp Members who left the campus on March 25, 1943 for the army to return to us. All were most enthusiastic over their being to take up the threads of civilian life again.

To the senior young lady, your cherished wish will come true a bit sooner than you think.

William Lowes appearance on the campus certainly caused a certain young lady's eyes to water and shine did it not Martha?

Since this is the final appearance of this column for the present school year, here's hoping that you have enjoyed reading its contents as much as the writer has enjoyed pegging it out for you. "Yours Truly" is signing his swan song (being graduated) but The Vets Bin will go on—it will not sing its swan song—it will go on as long as State-ites continue to answer the call to serve their country and return to us.

Bon Voyage—
Odell Uzzell—'47.

AN ARTIST IN OUR MIDST

Had anyone dreamed that Miss Travis of our English department had the news that she did have for us the day that she asked Dean McBae to permit her to make an announcement, we never would have sighed silently as we did. Going to the front of the auditorium, Miss Travis held above her head the most realistic landscape that most of us had ever seen on cloth, canvas or paper. Having given us the pleasant surprise that she had, she proceeded to tell us that this painting was the work of one of our fellow students and could be seen along with more work of that same person by stopping in the Science Building, room 68. For the next few days all those of us who did not know Mr. Foxworth were quite busy trying to get to know him. Wondering what inspired the talented young man to paint as he does, the writer asked him for an audience for an interview and was fortunate in getting the facts that she passes on to you here. It was while in Barcelona, Spain, that our fellow student decided to paint. He had done pencil, free hand drawing while attending P.S.I. in New York City and a training school in Marion, South Carolina. Having been taken by his mother to visit his grandparents who lived in Barcelona, he found the evening promenades along the streets of that city most pleasant. Nothing like the scenes he encountered in his home city and state, New York, New York. Mr. Foxworth says that his first inspiration was a lake and moon

"A LITTLE OF THIS AND THAT"

Pinkey you climb so well. From L. I. to P. P. is a long jump. Have you succeeded after all?

What's wrong L. H.? Don't the "Vets" appeal to you anymore or do you prefer the Marines?

C. H. stop "playing H. T. G. You know J. J. and F. W. wanted to attend the Prom.

"Attention, boys." Beware of G. G. because she is out man hunting and she is really desperate.

Well, what do you know? J. H. is really getting serious with F. T. Maybe it's the chocolates, more than F. T.

Mr. A. S. and Miss K. B.'s love affair is running smoothly. We hope it lasts. But—Beware! We know all; see all; and hear all.
