JOHN B. SCOTT RETIRES (Continued From Page 4)

ters and one son. The son, Mr. John S. Scott, is a graduate of Hampton Institute, and the two daughters—Mrs. Mary W. Scott Cherry, and Mrs. Susie Scott Shirley—are graduates of "State".

It is now a familiar sight to see Mr. Scott, "Mr. J. B." they call him, sitting on his front porch smoking a pipe and reading from Ruskin or from Emerson, authors in whom he has had a life-long interest. Eminently a man of the out-of-doors, he still loves roaming and fishing, and is known for his fabulous "fish stories"; he likes checkers and cards too. When asked about his greatest thrill over a 31-year period as a teacher, "Mr. J. B." replied, "My greatest thrill has been my work with the campus shrubbery and my walks through the woods to study nature." Obviously, his answer was that of a true biologist.

"FIRSTS" ON CAMPUS

Omega Mixer

On October 5, the Delta Gamma Chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity gave a smoker at the residence of Dr. Allan H. Brown. It was an evening of jokes, cards, music, food, and rubbing shoulders, all done "just for fun." Basileus Erwin Biggs, a junior of Pittsburgh, Pa., made remarks to the group in which he named the charter members, told of the frat's cardinal principles, and its purpose. Likewise, graduate members John W. Parker of the faculty and the Rev. E. J. Gregg of Fayetteville made brief remarks.

On Friday, October 26, 1951, the Omega group sponsored its annual "Queen for a Day" Program. The fraternity sweetheart for the academic year "51-52", Junior, Josephine Russell of Raleigh, was showered with gifts, escorted to lunch, to tea, to dinner, and to an evening movie.

Organized on May 24, 1951, Delta Gamma Chapter of Omega became the first fraternity to be organized on the campus. The ten charter members of the group are: Erwin Biggs, Basileus, a junior of Pittsburgh, Pa.; James Baten, Keeper of Records and Seals, sophomore of Asheville; James M. Faison, junior of Fayetteville; Emm McKinnon, junior of Fayetteville; Wilbert King, junior of Overhills; and William McNair, junior of Fayetteville. Edward T. Johnson and William Mack, juniors of Lexington, K., are now in the armed services and John S. Brown, junior of Englewood, N. J., has transferred to Rutgers University. Dr. Allan H. Brown and Mr. Henry Eldridge are faculty sponsors of the organization.

Bronco William Turner Injured

One of "Skipper" Gus Gaines' "top linesmen," William Turner, 175-pound guard from Pittsburgh, was injured in the Winston-Salem-Fayetteville game on October 13, and will see no further action this season. He is a freshman who has made a splendid gridiron record at Fayetteville. Although still incapacitated, William is back in class.

He comes from the Fifth Avenue High School in Pittsburgh where he was a star performer in football and in basketball. Turner is a brave Bronco.
