

The Voice 5/8/52

Symbol Of Truth And Light

The Smith Administration Building, erected in 1922, stands as a symbol of courage, truth, and light. Out from its walls have gone hundreds of students who are now taking their places as leaders in the field of education.

Langston Hughes Well Received

Langston Hughes, America's foremost Negro poet, spoke from the topic, "The Poetry of Negro Life and History" at the Fayetteville State Teachers College on Sunday, February 10. A large crowd of poetry lovers jammed the spacious college gymnasium to hear Mr. Hughes read some of his poetry and fiction against the background of his own rambling experience, and against the shortcomings of our American democratic order. Nowhere was there ever a question as to Mr. Hughes's stand on the matter of social justice for America's minorities, and especially the Negro group. He was introduced by Mr. John W. Parker of the Department of English. To heighten the occasion, Miss Maskle Sharpe, a sophomore of New York City, sang the spiritual, "On My Journey" and the beautiful number, "The Lord's Prayer." Her accompanist was Miss Mary E. Terry, Chairman of the Area of Music and Fine Arts.

A man of many parts, Langston Hughes has succeeded as poet, fictionist, essayist, dramatist, lecturer, radio scrip writer, and humorist. Following the program the Omega gave a reception in Mr. Hughes' honor.

Senior Of Year

Selected by the "Voice" staff as senior of the year, attractive Miss Lottie Tucker is Halifax, Virginia's contribution to the feminine beauty on the campus. Her hobby is collecting stamps.

Who's Who At "State"

Twelve top-ranking students at the Fayetteville State Teachers College, eight of them seniors and four juniors, were recently notified that their names had been listed in the 1951-1952 edition of "Who's Who among Students in American Colleges and Universities." The local selections were limited to upper classmen, and were based upon splendid scholarship, leadership, and citizenship records. It developed that all the students so honored were North Carolinians.

The complete roster of State

College Students, who enjoy the distinction of having their names listed with the leading students in other colleges and universities throughout the United States follows:

George Fitzpatrick, Fayetteville, N. C.; Emm McKinnon, Fayetteville, N. C.; Theophilus Parker, Edenton, N. C.; Lois Crews, Burgaw, N. C.; Hattie E. Hicks, Oxford, N. C.; Biddie Davis, Henderson, N. C.; Thelma Robinson, Wilmington, N. C.; Alice M. Boone, Garysburg, N. C.; Cora Baten, Asheville, N. C.; Bessie R. Johnson, Marven, N. C.; Ella Rhem, New Bern, N. C.; and James M. Faison, Fayetteville, N. C.

This is the second year that students at the Fayetteville State Teachers College have been listed in "Who's Who". Last year only five Fayetteville students were so honored.

The "Y" Means Service

The Y.W.C.A. has been quite active during the spring months. Activities included the giving of a program for the entertainment of patients at the Fort Bragg hospital and the rendition of an impressive Sunday School program in connection with the Universal Day of Prayer. Doris V. Wilson, Regional Secretary of the National Y. W. C. A., visited the campus for two days. Brenda Elliott and Pearl Everette attended the annual Eucumenical Conference in Chapel Hill on February 2, 1952, and Lovelyre Farmer, Aileen Watson, Geraldine Bullock, and Cora E. Baten attended an Interracial-Intercollegiate Conference held in Winston-Salem, February 15-17, 1952.

Dr. Ralph Linton Speaks

Dr. Ralph Linton, noted anthropologist, and currently professor of anthropology at Yale University, was the speaker at the assembly period on April 17th. His lecture centered about the place of Africa in early Western culture. He discussed certain diseases in Africa to which certain racial groups are susceptible and others, more or less immune. He indicated the contribution the domestication of plant and animals has made to the country.

The occasion was heightened by a series of questions from the floor.

WILLIE ARNOLD PINDLE

Business Manager Arthur J. Pindle and Mrs. Beatrice Pindle are the proud parents of a baby boy, Willie Arnold Pindle, who was born on March 24, 1952. He is expected to register as a Freshman in the fall.

"Profs" In Happy Mood

Two of State's newest instructors smile at what they find in a student notebook, American History, let us say. Left to right, they are: Mrs. Estelle A. Eaton of the Department of Education and Mr. Edward W. Martin of the Department of Physical Science.