

FSU ESTABLISHES SATELLITE CAMPUSES IN THE AREA

Fayetteville State University has established several satellite campuses as a part of the Division of Continuing Education at the university.

According to Dr. DeField T. Holmes, Vice Chancellor for the Fayetteville State University - Fort Bragg - Pope Air Force Base Campus, the FSU division of Continuing Education exists for the purpose of providing educational opportunities to people beyond the time they either graduate or drop out of the formal education system and for people who have entered the work force and desire to continue their formal or informal education.

"It is paramount that continuing education in this context must be the vehicle that carries Fayetteville State University's programs to the people. A means of answering the educational needs of the people of Southeastern North Carolina has been the establishment of satellite campuses," Dr. Holmes said.

Fayetteville State University now has satellite campuses at Goldsboro, Smithfield, Kenansville, and Siler City. The establishing of the satellite campuses has been the direct responsibility of Dr. Jerry Paschal, Associate to the Vice Chancellor at FSU - Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force.

A group of people on each of the satellite campuses have decided on a specific degree program and are now in the process of taking courses to fulfill the university's requirement. The subjects they are pursuing are outlined in the FSU catalogue and are taught by instructors approved by the FSU administration.

"This is an excellent opportunity for people to continue to work in their respective communities and to work on a college degree. They will never have to leave their local community and receive a college degree," Dr. Holmes said.

Many of the satellite campus enrollees are in-service teachers taking courses for professional improvement and certificate renewal.

The future seems very encouraging for developing more Fayetteville State University satellite campuses as the people have indicated a genuine feeling of satisfaction on being able to continue their education and still meet the demands required by their profession.

He who permits himself to tell a lie once, finds it much easier to do it a second and third time, till at length it becomes habitual; he tells lies without attending to it, and truths without the world's believing him. This falsehood of the tongue leads to that of the heart, and in time depraves all its good dispositions.

SO HARD TO BE A BRONCO

by Belvia Williams
I use to always win,
but now I sometimes lose,
I use to stay in debt,
but now I pay my dues.

I use to feel self-conscious,
but now I've left my cave.

I use to count each hour,
but now I count each day,
I use to get in free,
but now I have to pay.

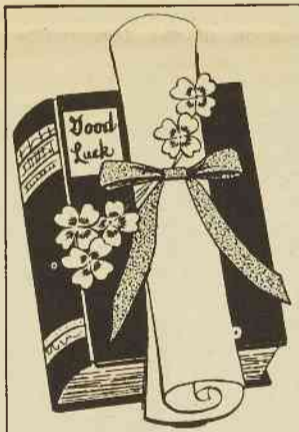

I use to be a slave,
but now I'm free,
I use to be blind,
but now I can see.

I use to be cold,
but now I stay warm,
I use to only sing a song,
but now I can write a poem.

I use to be a Black girl,
but now I'm a Black lady,
I use to be called "Kathy",
but now I'm "Miss Katie".

I use to be a coward,
but now I stand up brave,

I use to always say yes,
but now I can say no,
I use to just be a student,
but now I'm a mighty "Bronco."

May each new day be a bright page in the book of happiness.
