A Mind Is A Terrible Thing To Waste

I am sure you have heard the above statement a countless number of times on television, and I often wonder if most students at Fayetteville State University are cognizant of its real significance.

As Placement Director at Fayetteville State, I am becoming increasingly alarmed that too many of our students are wasting their minds.

Today's world is a demanding world. Above all, it demands quality and competency. If you are one who is contented with just getting by and not acquiring the best possible education during your four years here, I suggest you withdraw immediately rather than be faced with the frustration of trying to secure employment if you accidentally graduate.

Students, it is imperative that you set your priorities and discipline your mind. Too many of you appear to be majoring in such things as "student unionology, cardology, partyology, fraternity, sorority, and social clubology."

Grant you, these things are fine in their proper perspective, but not a priority for attending college.

I have often said that the very freedom that we have gained could be the freedom that will destroy us. Freedom without discipline is chaotic. You must set your goals, realize your purposes for attending college and move methodically to accomplish these ends.

During a recent interview, Dr. Benjamin Mays, an outstanding black educator was asked, "What advice would you give the black youth of today?" He answered, "As for a black youth, I have said and I still say, 'yes, I am for black awareness and I am for black power - and black is beautiful'. But rhetoric doesn't train your mind. Rhetoric doesn't give you a skill. I say to them as I would say to whites or to anybody, a man is respected in this world only because he knows how to do something well and he has a skill that the community needs. But he shouldn't expect anybody to be easy on him because he has been discriminated against, because he has been segregated, or because his ancestors were slaves. He should expect, however, special opportunity to overcome handicaps of the past. You may not escape being discriminated against if you are competent. But if you are not competent, if you are not trained, welfare will be your lot."

In other words, young people, there is no substitute for competency. In closing, I challenge you to re-evaluate your thinking, set your priorities and settle for nothing less than the best. You owe it to yourself, your parents, your community and to your country.

FSU Business Honor Society Is Busy Chapter

Epsilon Lambda Chapter of Pi Omega Pi, national business education honor society, at its last initiation welcomed into the organization five new members. The organization is now making plans for its spring initiation.

Pi Omega Pi is one of 47 college honor societies affiliated with the Association of College Honor Societies. The chapter of Pi Omega Pi at Fayetteville State is the 131st chapter of the national organization. The purposes and objectives of Pi Omega Pi include the following:

--To establish and direct chapters of Pi Omega Pi in colleges and universities engaged in business teacher education.

--To create a fellowship among teachers of business subjects.

--To create and encourage interest and promote scholarship in business education.

--To encourage civic responsibility.

--To foster high ethical standards in business and professional life among teachers of business.

--To teach the ideal of service as the basis of all worthy enterprises.

New members initiated into the organization were Mary Sue Brock, Minnie Bryant, Roberta Gibson, Percy Owens, and Miss Carrie Stokes, a faculty member.

Participating in the service were the president of the chapter, Joyce Blue, and charter members Barbara Melvin, Jacqueline Lennon, and Dr. Grace Black, sponsor for the Epsilon Lambda Chapter.

Following the initiation, faculty and staff of the Department joined members of Pi Omega Pi in a banquet held at the Empire Steak House on Bragg Boulevard.
