Wearing school colors or affordable FSU T-shirts on a special day during the week of an upcoming sports event.-Dorchell Hurst

We feel that, since our schedules frequently do not permit us to attend the local games, wearing something as a symbol shows we are supporting our university at least in spirit. That practice would help commuters feel less alienated from the campus.

Forums are scheduled at times less likely for commuting students to attend.

When this comment was made, several ideas came to mind. Perhaps a particular forum could be scheduled in the evening or on a weekend, in addition to normal scheduling times. It also might help commuting students to have the forum videotaped to view at their own leisure. This procedure might also enable them to earn extra credit points because some courses require that a student attend at least one or two forums.

We need activities that will cater to non-traditional students because of our mature age status, like gospel programs. - Danyce Hill

Not discounting the traditional students' role at the university, non-traditional students would like to have entertaining programs that will appeal to a variety of students and not just cater to the younger crowd.

More class sections should be offered.

Some commuting students might have to wait an additional semester to graduate in order to take a particular class because of the scheduling offered by the university. For example, if the student wants to sign up for African-American History or French, and the section available is offered only in the afternoons, that scheduling may present a problem to commuting students who must schedule their classes in the morning.

This newspaper should provide a great opportunity for commuting students to have their voices heard on important issues that concern them. I think that setting up a commuting student suggestion box, encouraging students to mail in comments, or exploring other avenues of communication would be a logical start for fellow commuting students to feel a part of FSU.

Are You Culturally Aware?

You attend classes, you study and do homework, but are you culturally aware? Do you want to explore your own unique culture and how it impacts on other cultures? Would you like to hike through Holland, backpack through Botswana, or go to Kenya for a semester or year and still earn credits? Then, join the Multi-Cultural Club and experience cultures from around the world and a whole lot more! The Multi-Cultural Club focuses on self-awareness, cultural diversity, cross-cultural awareness, improvement of race relations, an international exchange program, and academic excellence. We offer positions in different committees, focusing on publicity, fund raising, special events, research and programming, so check us out and see what area you might be interested in, or just become a member and share our goal. Whether it is sponsoring guest speakers on campus, field trips, social events, or seminars, the Multi-Cultural Club will be involved and would like you to be involved, too. Together, we can make a difference! We will meet Thursday, October 7th at 2:00 PM in the Curriculum Lab, second floor of the library. For more information, call 486-1391 and leave a message for the clubadvisor. Just say you are interested in the Multi-Cultural Club.

Hope to see you there!
