

The Broncos' Song

A Reminder of David

by Shelly Marie

There are those flowers that emerge from beneath the earth's soil and grow towards the sun, but are unable to merge with nature. Sadly, they eventually crumble and return to the earth offering the only life they possess to enable other life to continue. Then there are those flowers that explode from beneath the earth's soil and reach to the sun for life, unfolding their brilliance and beauty as they grow. Eventually they offer their seed to mother earth to bring forth more beauty of their kind. Having brought beauty to the earth,
Having lived a full life,
Having passed on their beautiful seeds,
They then return to the earth, merging as one to spend eternity!

Seabrook Park

By Gyendor

Brothers rolling to the rim with juice.
Sisters on the side, looking fly, provide the boost.
Rollers on the stroll, in control, and ya know it.
Ain't got the flow, gotta know ya gotta go.

Ninety-five degrees and I'm seizing me some shade.
Beeped my kid, T Larry G—I'm getting paid.
Float a C note for a G who needed aid.
Won't get played—sucker fades, sucker's sprayed.

Parking lot's the spot with the hops and it's popping.
Little loc's missing strokes for the shit they propping.
Sunset setting low on it's stroll,
time to go and I'm not stopping Cause One Time's on the grind, no friend of mine, and he's locking brothers up for whatever's up or whatever's on his mind at the time
cause he's so inclined and he's clever.

I swerve to miss the curb,
look back with love, then I book.
All-n-all, that's the call as it falls
at The Brook.

Untitled

by Maureen Washington

*The sultry beauty of eclipsed moon,
Brings thoughts of romance into bloom.
Is it the mysterious of darkness which hides—
A more pleasing place where verse resides?
Or eyes?*