Flava

D happily commented that "...it couldn't have happened without 107.7, because Foxi wouldn't give me any support. Flava, Respect due!" Arnold Moore, manager of Skin Deep, an area R&B group that recently completed taping Showtime At the Apollo (to be aired this Spring) stated that "it's almost impossible for local talent to build a following without the support of our radio stations. I'm really glad that 107.7 FM (and WFSS 91.9 FM) are addressing that need." 107.7 FM isn't stopping there. Future plans include establishing even stronger community ties with area universities, schools, Ft. Bragg and Pope Air Force Base, as well as provide internships for aspiring D.J.'s. (They were also responsible for bringing in Fayetteville's very own superstar group This-N-That for last year's Christmas parade).

107.7 FM's sudden growth and impact is a textbook example of analyzing a market, identifying a need, evaluating resources, formulating a plan, and putting that plan into action. And though this formula isn't always successful, it's nice to see and be able to appreciate when it does work to the benefit of all concerned. I think Foxy 99.1 FM personality Bobby J. put it best when he said "We welcome 107.7 FM and wish them well. In fact, their presence is actually good for Fayetteville." Indeed, for instead of one urban radio station to sample and savor, we now have two. The only difference is that 107.7 FM is the "flava" you've got to taste and savor with your ears!
