

Construction around campus: Closing Updated

Voice graphic by Jennifer Lucas

by Jennifer Lucas
Voice Co-managing editor

The construction between the School of Business and Economics, the Nursing Education and Research Center and the Charles W. Chesnutt Library has been opened. The geo-thermal drilling for Renaissance Hall has been completed. Most of the underground work for the New Technology Building has been completed allowing the area around the Lyons Science Building and Lyons Science Annex that had been blocked off for the past several weeks to be re-opened. Due to the recent changes in construction several areas around campus that had been previously closed are now re-open as seen in the map. Please continue to use the tips provided by The Voice to ensure a fast and safe route to class.