

Poetry Garden

Institutionalized

by Marcus Dupree
Voice Staff Writer

They don't want no learning—work, not grow
 And when they're found out, you just let go
 But being a slave is all I know
 I gave up the game, I stopped the show
 I don't even think naysayers realize
 That I have been institutionalized
 Been doin hard labor, ate their lies
 Considered a workhorse in their eyes
 But now as I leave these fields so deep—
 —though I can't say that I'll wail or weep
 I pray the Good Lord my soul to keep Please, watch over my brothers like a flock of sheep...

Poetry Garden is Back, Poetics WANTED!!!

If you write poetry and want to see it published....then The Voice is for you. Poets can now submit their work to The Voice at fsuvoice.articles@gmail.com.

Voice Staff Photographer Antonio Monroe

Freshman Anthony Velazquez showing off his dance moves while he waits for the cafe to open on Friday.

Inspirational Moment titled "Breaking Through"

Voice Staff Photographer Brittany Hunter

The digital art of Brittany Hunter

We all go through hard and difficult times. Sometimes we have a wall up and it eventually cracks and breaks down. After the break down, comes the breakthrough. When the wall finally breaks down, there is sunlight and brighter days on the other side.