A fright

Someone who refused the light

Whispered in my ear one night

When I died, my Mother cried

Looked into the sky

Asked God why

You are living in a material world, and you are a Material girl

In a world of dueling dualities, conflicting realities

The infinite roll of one die, probable possibilities on planes of endless possibility

On a last sigh a baby cries, the hard truth of the lovely lie

People live and die, come to the light child don't cry

Still with a stubborn tear in my ghostly eye, I ask God

Why did I have to die?
