

Her Curlz R Badd

By Dalecia Carr

Since the season has turned from summer to fall, the temperature has plummeted. This can take a toll on your hair. Wearing protective styles such as braids, updos, turbans, and sew-ins are good ways to battle the cold air. Keeping your hair tucked away prevents it from getting caught in wool sweaters, scarfs, or beanie. Adding deep conditioning treatments to your weekly routine can help with length retention. I like to add a little bit of olive oil to my treatments so that it can help intensify the shine and softness. Some naturals see the cold weather as the perfect opportunity to wear their hair straight since the cool temperature doesn't "sweat out our edges". When using heat you must be cautious since heat can alter your curl pattern. To avoid this you can use a heat protectant to combat heat damage. Get creative with your hair and define your own natural beauty!

For more tips or to be a feature Badd Curlz Girl or Guy, contact me at:
www.fsuthevoice.com
 Follow me on Instagram @Hercurlzrbadd
 Email: dcarr1@brncos.uncfsu.edu

This week's features:

Name: Victoria Bradford
 Classification: Junior
 Major: Speech Communication
 Journey: Still Transitioning
 Regimen: She washes her hair once a week with shampoo and flat irons her hair once a week. She gets her hair trimmed every 6 weeks. At night she wraps her hair in a circular motion with a silk scarf before going to bed.
 Favorite Product: Palmer's Coconut oil Formula Repairing Conditioner™
 This Natural Beauty decided to go natural because her family encouraged her. Her advice for new naturals is to "Stick with it because it will work out in the long run". She loves the fact that natural hair is so versatile.

Name: Tia-Lacha (Tia) Gilliam
 Classification: Senior
 Major: Phycology
 Journey: Big Chopped to the "Tia Brush Cut"
 Regimen: Once a week she cleanses her hair and conditions it. To style she watches Youtube™ to come up with trendy styles.
 Favorite Products: Cantu Shea Butter, Leave-in Conditioning Repair Crème™ and Silk Elements™ products.
 After talking with her family members she drummed up the courage to cut her hair into a "Dark Cesar" brush cut. She rocked this low cut hairstyle for seven months and began to grow it longer. People were shocked to see a girl with this kind of hairstyle. Her advice for other girls is "Try out different products to find out what works for you".

