

Editor's Note

Although media is the coveted choice of most these days, The Voice student newspaper has somehow become the step child of the university. Students as well as faculty have talked but failed to walk the stride needed to run and support a successful news publication.

Under great scrutiny The Voice has risen above expectations, changed its aesthetics to please socially unconscious readers, and pushed its way into the eyes of many who would otherwise deny newspaper reading.

It is with frustration that I again challenge the student body, faculty, etc to "Be About It". By "It" I mean The Voice.

In this critical time of questionable morals it is imperative that we remain actively involved in the core principals that have established our very right to express and exist. In the spirit of Ida B. Wells and W.E. B DuBois, long live newspaper!
